Lie Charged to Tokyo.

Shanghai, Oct. 1.—Rear Admiral Harry Yarnell, bitterly assailing Japanese bombardment of Chinese cities, charged tonight Japanese had misquoted American advices on evacuation in order to justify an aerial attack September 25 on Hankow and the Hankow-Canton railway.

The commander of the United States Asiatic fleet branded as erroneous a Japanese spokesman's statement Ambassador Nelson T. Johnson had advised the Japanese navy that all Americans and other foreigners would be evacuated from the Hankow area by noon September 26. Yarnell said that in reality Johnson told Japanese that foreigners would be evacuated from the territory after that date.

He stated several thousand foreigners, including 1,000 Americans, are in the Yangtze River Valley and added that "it is imperative that a safe route" for their evacuation be agreed upon.

Chinese meanwhile said Japan was considering a further warning to foreign powers to evacuate Nanking to avoid danger of air raids. The

Author's Wedding In Va. Climaxes Romance by Mail

Seven years ago Miss Margaret Wooters Hallowell, of Los Angeles, and Stoyan Christowe, novelist, met only to part and live a continent apart—she on the West Coast, he in New York.

Yesterday their romance that flowered via mail was climaxed by marriage at Falls Church, Va. Incidentally, it was the first time they had seen each other since, although they had corresponded regularly.

With George Stimpson, former president of the National Press Club, as best man, the would-beweds drove from Washington to Fairfax, obtained the license, then journeyed to Falls Church. There they were married in the Presbyterian Church by the Rev. Alton B. Altfather, an old school friend of the Macedonian author. Mrs. Altfather was the bridesmaid.

England Fears Quick Fascist 'Push' in Spain

Intense Drive Would Attempt to Win War by Winter.

By the Associated Press.

London, Oct. 1.—Diplomatic quarters expressed concern tonight over a report that Italy and Germany have agreed on a major offensive in Spain to give insurgent forces a victory before winter.

The reported plan was said to involve razing of Madrid by a fleet of German bombers and an offensive on the Aragon and Teruel fronts with the aid of Italian volunteers.

Diplomatic quarters said the report was that the onslaught was agreed upon by Premier Mussolini and Chancellor Hitler in their recent talks at Berlin.

The report was said to mention that 350 German planes would be used, but there was no indication of whether the planes already were in Spain or would be shipped.

Informed sources said a "most dangerous situation" would result if fresh troops and planes were shipped into Spain for an insurgent offensive. They added that such action would bring an immediate response from London and Paris.

Even if such an assault were carried out with men and materials already in insurgent territory, diplomatic sources said, it would run up against firm Anglo-French determination not to tolerate an Italo-German engineered victory.

This determination apparently was the basis of the French-British resolve to get action on the volunteers issue. A note was sent to Rome tonight to invite Italy to three-party talks on the question.

Troops Search City for Leaders in Terrorism; Grand Mufti Hides.

By the Associated Press.

Jerusalem, Oct. 1.—British authorities swept down on Arab leaders in Palestine today in a coup designed to crush the Holy Land's long months of terrorism.

Several high Arab leaders were arrested and held for deportation, probably to an island in the Red Sea. The Arab higher committee, accused of being the "brains" behind recurrent waves of terrorism, was declared illegal.

While troops armed with machine guns guarded the frontiers and combed the cities, the Grand Mufti of Jerusalem, spiritual head of all Arabs, in Palestine, apparently escaped the dragnet. He was believed to be in hiding within the Mosque of Omar, holiest Moslem sanctuary in the ancient city.

Authorities seemed determined to capture the Mufti, Amin El Husseini, descendant of the Prophet Mohammed. However, they apparently did not want to transgress upon holy ground for fear of stirring up further Arab resistance.

The Mufti was deprived of his

Interference In Teaching Laid to U. S.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 1.—Abraham Epstein, internationally-known authority on social security and an instructor at New York University, has filed a written protest with the Government, charging "serious encroachment on academic freedom."

His complaint, in a letter to A. J. Altmyer, chairman of the Social Security Board at Washington, has to do with a telephone call and a letter to the university from the office here of Mrs. Anna M. Rosenberg, regional director of the board.

Object, "Co-operation."

It charges that her office "informed the university that my point of view is not the official one and that some other person ought to represent the official point of view."

Mrs. Rosenberg says the telephone call was made by Mrs. Ruth Tennant, of her office, but insists the object was to "co-operate as far as possible with any agency disseminating information pertaining to any phase of social security."

In his letter to Altmeyer, Epstein said:

"Since, unlike in Germany, Italy and Russia, we have so far not become familiar with what are official and nonofficial points of view, I frankly consider this an unwarranted attempt to curtail my Constitutional liberty of speech and my opportunities for earning a livelihood through a discussion of social insurance, which subject I have not only studied but devoted my entire life to. This action also involves a serious encroachment on academic freedom. You can readily see that such tactics are of tremendous concern to me personally as well as to the Nation."

Teachers Back Epstein.

Mrs. Rosenberg also made public her letter to the university, which said:

"I am wondering if the faculty has considered the practical advantage of inviting an authorized representative of the Social Security Board to supplement this (Epstein's) course with an exposition of the policies, administration and methods of procedure actually in operation to effectuate the purposes of the social security act, particularly with regard to old-age insurance."

As for the university authorities themselves, Dean Ned H. Dearborn said Epstein's lectures would be continued as scheduled, unaffected by the letter and telephone call.

The incident had some echoes, however, in other quarters. Arthur A. Ballantine, former Undersecretary of the Treasury and a director of the American Association for Social Security, of which Epstein is executive secretary, said:

"The telephone call and letter constitute an invasion of academic freedom. The association will back Mr. Epstein to the limit."

Epstein has been a persistent critic, in speeches and magazine articles, of the Administration's social security act.

2 Officers Face Courts-Martial In Grounding of U.S.S. Omaha

Capt. Howard B. Mecleary and Lieut. Comdr. Edgar R. Winckler, commanding officer and navigator, respectively, of the light cruiser Omaha, which ran aground in the Bahamas last July, face trial by general court-martial, it was learned at the Navy Department yesterday.

In line with the recommendation of the board of investigation, charges of negligence and neglect of duty have been made.

Mecleary has been charged with "suffering a vessel of the Navy to be stranded through negligence." Winckler faces an identical count and a second one for "neglect of duty."

On July 19, the day the Omaha ran aground, Capt. Mecleary had been in command ten months, and Commander Winckler had been on duty 30 days. The accident occurred near Castle Island Light, at the entrance to Crooked Island Passage, in the South Bahamas.

The ship was floated ten days after the accident and since has been undergoing repairs at Norfolk.

Both Capt. Mecleary and Commander Winckler have distinguished records. During the World War Capt. Mecleary was on duty as navigator of the battleship Alabama, and received the Victory Medal with Atlantic Fleet Clasp. Commander Winckler received the same decoration for his service in the Oklahoma.

Text of Justice Black's speech last night:

The Constitution is the supreme law of our country. The bill of rights is the heart of the Constitution.

The constitutional safeguard to complete liberty of religious belief is a declaration of the greatest importance to the future of America as a Nation of free people. Any movement or action by any group that threatens to bring about a result inconsistent with this unrestricted individual right is a menace to freedom.

Let me repeat:

Any program, even if directed by good intention, which tends to breed or revive religious discord or antagonism, can and may spread with such rapidity as to imperil this vital Constitutional protection of one of the most sacred of human rights.

I believe that no ordinary maneuver executed for political advantage would justify a member of the Supreme Court in publicly discussing it. If, however, that maneuver threatens the existing peace and harmony between religious or racial groups in our country, the occasion is not an ordinary one. It is extraordinary.

Ex-College Star Makes Wife Face Rival, Kills Both

Detroit, Oct. 1.—Police at the Shaefer station said Probationary Patrolman William Hawthorne, former collegiate pole vault star, walked into the station today and announced he had killed his wife Catherine and John M. Barrett.

Police rushed to Barrett's home and found Barrett and Mrs. Hawthorne both dead.

Hawthorne was graduated from Michigan Normal College last June. He was attached to the Conner station.

Detective Lieut. Earl Sweitzer said "Hawthorne went to Barrett's home at noon in uniform and asked him if he knew Mrs. Hawthorne. According to the story as we get it, Barrett denied knowing Mrs. Hawthorne was married.

"There was an argument. Barrett left to get Mrs. Hawthorne. They returned together. There was more argument. Hawthorne shot them."

Barrett was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Myron M. Barrett, of Detroit, and was manager of a branch bank. Barrett's mother was present when the slaying occurred, Sweitzer said.

Justice Black sat last night in the comparative seclusion of the home of his friend, Claude Hamilton, but from some of the eyewitnesses to the epoch-making speech a fairly accurate picture of the historic setting could be drawn.

Mrs. Clifford J. Durr, the justice's sister-in-law, ushered most of the radio men and the Secret Service men into the living room of the Hamilton home at 3122 Tennyson place northwest.

Mrs. Durr brought a group of announcers into the room—decorated in Colonial style with paper of soft tan forest print. She spoke of the few guests who were to hear the momentous address:

Fete Prevents Roosevelt From Hearing Black

By Franklyn Waltman.

A Staff Correspondent.

Tacoma, Wash., Oct. 1.—As Justice Black addressed the Nation tonight, President Roosevelt was bringing to an end here the most arduous day he has yet spent on his tour of the Pacific Northwest.

Mr. Roosevelt did not hear the Black speech, but it is understood a stenographic transcript was made for him. At the time Justice Black was addressing the Nation, Mr. Roosevelt was receiving military honors at Fort Lewis, Wash.

The automobile in which he was riding was not equipped with a radio, although earlier in the day he rode in a closed car which had a radio. He transferred to an open and radioless car a few minutes before reaching Olympia.

The Roosevelt party was more than an hour late in its arrival at Tacoma, although, strangely enough, it was on schedule at Olympia, 33 miles away. It seemed that the party was delayed time and time again until after the Black speech was made. At the Tacoma station, Mr. Roosevelt made a brief speech, but said nothing which could be interpreted as bearing on Black or his confession of Klan affiliation.

With the official party aboard silent, waiting on the President, observers on the Roosevelt train were divided in reaction. The majority were of the opinion that the situation remained unchanged.

John L. Lewis, labor leader, lauded Justice Hugo L. Black's speech tonight as a "powerful and straightforward statement."

Commenting on the address in which Black said he once had joined the Klu Klux Klan but later had resigned and never rejoined, the chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization said:

"It defines the creed of all Americans, as well as that of Justice Black."

Another who commented was Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia. The Virginian said he still didn't think the appointment of the Alabaman was "a fit one."

Questioned on Black's discussion of his Klan membership, Glass said:

"There is no comment to make. He admits he was a member of the Klan, but disavows the things the Klan was understood to advocate."

"I voted against confirmation of Senator Black, regardless of the charges that undertook to connect him with the Klan. I didn't think the appointment was a fit one, and Originating from the modest home of Mr. and Mrs. Claude E. Hamilton, jr., 3122 Tennyson street northwest, the broadcast came in Justice Black's normal voice, perhaps a trifle slower than is his custom, a touch of gravity in keeping with the situation discernible.

He had arrived at the Hamilton home at 7:06 p. m., entering the house by the basement garage door to avoid photographers.

Outside a crowd of several hundred neighbors, reporters, cameramen and others, already were trampling the grass on the Hamilton and adjoining lawns. Flares lighted the neighborhood as news-

Never Considered Card Membership

Justice Explains He Left Band Before Election as Senator.

By Robert C. Albright.

Avowing past membership in the Ku Klux Klan, Associate Justice Hugo L. Black in a precedent-breaking speech last night told a national radio audience he was no longer a member and denounced any movement "which tends to breed or revive religious discord or antagonism."

It was his first and last public statement on Klan membership charges that have raged furiously during his three weeks of silence.

Black frankly admitted he joined the Klan "about 15 years ago" and later resigned, but denied life membership charges directed at his record.

"I never have considered and I do not now consider the unsolicited card given me shortly after my nomination to the Ser te as a membership of any kind in the Ku Klux Klan," he said. "I never used it. I did not even keep it."

He spoke in slow, distinctly enunciated phrases, his voice rising only when he wished to give emphasis to some meaningful word. The accents of his native Southland were marked. Despite his unhurried delivery, he was through in 15 minutes. Half an hour had been allotted.

The former Alabama Senator declared his complete adherence to "the constitutional safeguard to complete liberty of religious beliefs," said some of his best friends were Catholics and Jews, and professed "sympathy and admiration for the colored race."

He stood entirely on his record as a Senator, which he said, "refutes every implication of racial or religious intolerance."

Cites Liberal Record.

"It shows that I was of that group of liberal Senators who have consistently fought for the civil, economic and religious rights of all Americans, without regard to race or creed."

The new Supreme Court Associate Justice, whose alleged Klan affiliations provoked a Nation-wide controversy while he vacationed in Europe, spoke from the Chevy Chase home of Claude E. Hamilton, general counsel of the RFC and Black's close friend.

His words were carried over some 318 stations of the National, Colum-

Treasury Fails Twice to Get Varying Offers

Morgenthau Is Obliged to Award Contracts to Mail-Order House.

By the Associated Press.

Justice Department officials announced last night they would investigate immediately the bids of 14 manufacturers on a big Government order of automobile tires and tubes.

The Treasury, reporting the bids were identical, turned them over to the department "for action" after Attorney General Cummings had recommended that "the whole matter be referred to the Department of Justice with a view to prosecution."

After examining the bids, a Treasury statement said, Cummings issued an opinion that "the conclusion was justified that these identical bids were the result of collusive action and of a combination in restraint of trade."

On Cummings' advice, the original bids, opened July 21, were rejected. In September, a second set of bids "made the same showing of collusion as those previously received," the Treasury statement declared.

As a result, the announcement continued, Secretary Morgenthau decided "that a further effort to secure legally acceptable bids by advertisement would be futile." He then negotiated an independent contract with Sears, Roebuck & Co., Chicago mail-order house.

Prices Are Lower.

Treasury officials said prices offered by Sears-Roebuck "were substantially lower" on every item in the contract than those submitted in the 14 bids, the difference approximating 15 per cent in some cases.

The contract was for a six-month period beginning today. Officials estimated it would amount to more than $1,000,000. They said that Sears-Roebuck may buy the tires from any manufacturer, including those whose bids were rejected.

The Treasury referred the rejected bids to the Federal Trade Commission as well as to the Justice Department.

Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson reported that the anti-trust division of the Justice Department, which he heads, has received only part of the evidence, but that the inquiry will be started at once.

Cost of Inspecting Abattoirs Studied; D.C. May Hike Fee

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen yesterday informed Secretary Ickes that he had ordered an inquiry to determine whether the cost of inspecting abattoirs is more than the $100 license fee required.

He said Health Officer George C. Ruhland had been instructed to find out whether the cost of inspecting the Benning plant would exceed $100 a year. Hazen said that if it does steps will be taken to make the fee equal to the cost to the District.

Meanwhile, D. Edward Clarke, attorney for the Gobel company, said a conference will be held next week with the objective of resuming work on the slaughterhouse.

Politics and People

Roosevelt's Popularity Abundantly Demonstrated by His Trip in Northwest.

—By Franklyn Waltman—

TRAVELING with President Roosevelt in the Pacific Northwest, Oct. 1.—President Roosevelt's swing across the Northwestern part of the United States has abundantly demonstrated that he is as popular, if not more so, as he ever was in this section.

WALTMAN.

This is indicated by the large and enthusiastic crowds which have greeted him wherever he arrives. It is reflected in the daily newspapers and in the reports of local newspapermen whose business it is to keep a finger on the public pulse and who have joined up with the Presidential party for short distances.

It is evidenced, moreover, by the result of private conversations with the man in the street—taxicab drivers, local merchants, station porters, railroad yardmen and farmers with whom this writer has talked by the dozens in the last week.

* * *

Conversation with these persons, however, reveals that Mr. Roosevelt's popularity is largely personal. Many of these persons disagree with various things he has done. One says he does not like the President's flirtations with John L. Lewis. Another says he is a Catholic and cannot understand the appointment of Hugo L. Black to the Supreme Court. Still another feels Mr. Roosevelt is spending too much money. Many are critical of WPA relief, contending that many who are feeding at the Federal trough could, but will not, get private jobs.

As one travels along there is criticism of this or that particular Federal undertaking, such as the Alpine Hotel which WPA has constructed at Mount Hood—a magnificent piece of work in native stone and wood and artistically furnished. It is a tribute to the ingenuity and skill of WPA workers.

But, costing $650,000 or more—some say as much as $850,000—the project seems destined to be a lemon. It was intended to make Mount Hood a great winter skiing resort, but no thought was given as to how the roads up the mountain would be kept open in the winter. Usually from 5 to 10 feet of snow covers those roads and it is a gigantic task to make them passable in winter.

The Government intends to turn operation of this hotel over to a private concessionaire. With the Government offering the concessionaire free rent in return for 80 per cent of the net profits—that is 20 per cent for the concessionaire—there have been no bidders for the concession because of a requirement that the concessionaire keep the roads open during the winter. Those who investigated the scheme found it would cost at least $7,000 a winter to keep the roads open—and they found that heating the hotel with its many open fireplaces would cost close to $200 a day.

This project is cited because a number of persons in Oregon regard it as a white elephant and lemon. Others in that State are dubious about the eventual financial success of the much more costly Bonneville and Grand Coulee dams. They doubt that either project will prove to be economically sound either from a power, a navigation or, in the case of Grand Coulee, a reclamation viewpoint.

Moreover, the Northwest salmon fishing industry is very fearful lest the Bonneville Dam will destroy that industry because of the impediment to salmon passing up the Columbia River to spawn. The Government has spent more than $5,000,000 for "ladders" and "elevators" to take the salmon over the dam. Apparently, the theory is that if the salmon are too tired to climb, they will ride the elevators. But it is an experiment and it has the salmon fishery industry greatly worried.

The same people, however, who tell you about these things, usually end up by lauding President Roosevelt. They explain that his heart is in the right place, even though he might make mistakes. Out here where men have been adventuresome, they say, in effect, that Mr. Roosevelt is making progress for the Nation by being bold, and that, anyway, the country is much better off than it was in 1932.

This same reaction to the President is seen in the large crowds that have greeted him. In Portland, the downtown streets were jammed with people who came to get a fleeting sight of the President, even though that day he proclaimed a public power policy at Bonneville against which the leaders of Portland and Oregon had fought—a policy which, it is claimed, will benefit the State of Washington to the detriment of Oregon.

No man could have received a warmer and more enthusiastic reception in Seattle than did the President on his arrival. Crowds jammed from the buildings out into the middle of the street in some sections, uproariously cheering Mr. Roosevelt, and covering him with confetti and torn strips of newspaper as he rode along in a flower-bedecked automobile. This reception took place at 9:30 o'clock at night, which meant that the 100,000 persons or more who lined the business-section streets came back downtown after dinner.

Yet Seattle is strongly hostile to the Lewis Committee for Industrial Organization. It is perhaps the most completely unionized city in the country—but, with the exception of the longshoremen and one or two small units, it is all American Federation of Labor organization.

Due chiefly to the shrewd and dominating influence of Dave Beck, organizer in 11 Western States for the Teamsters Union (affiliated with the A. F. of L.), Seattle is ardently opposed to the C. I. O.—and it does not like Mr. Roosevelt's encouragement of that organization.

But when it comes to liking Mr. Roosevelt himself, that does not seem to make any difference. Whether it would make any difference should Mr. Roosevelt seek a third term is a controversial point. But it is clear that no man in the country can rally behind him personally as many people as Mr. Roosevelt.

U. S. Has Export Edge of $31,988,000

By the Associated Press.

Increasing world demand for American goods gave the Nation a $31,988,000 export balance during August, the Commerce Department reported yesterday.

Sales were $277,695,000; purchases, $245,707,000.

The August balance compared with a $14,098,000 excess of imports in the same month a year ago. The change resulted in part from heavier shipments of agricultural commodities and petroleum.

For the first eight months of this year, however, imports exceeded exports by $111,923,000. This compared with an import balance of only $38,312,000 in the corresponding 1936 period.

C.I.O. Asks Nice For Protection From Vigilantes

Organizers Are Threatened at Cambridge Packing Plant, Union Claims.

Officials of the Committee for Industrial Organization late yesterday wired Gov. Harry W. Nice of Maryland asking him to protect C. I. O. organizers in Cambridge, Md., who, they said, had been threatened with formation of a vigilance committee to run them out of town.

The National Labor Relations Board, asked to act, sent an agent from Baltimore, while the Senate Civil Liberties Committee, which has investigated numerous cases of alleged terrorism, likewise was notified of the reported Cambridge threats, the C. I. O. said.

Later last night, the C. I. O. announced it had received a reply from Nice referring the request to State Labor Commissioner Harry Phoebus. The C. I. O. officials said that afterward they communicated with Phoebus and received assurance he will go to Cambridge today.

In the wire to Nice, the union said "mob violence" has been "threatened" and demanded "protection" lest a "serious situation" develop.

Headquarters here of the C. I. O. and of the United Cannery, Agricultural Packing and Allied Workers of America, a C. I. O. union seeking to organize workers of the Phillips Packing Co. at Cambridge, kept in touch with their organizers by long distance telephone.

They were told that both Cambridge newspapers had published similar calls for formation of a vigilance committee in opposition to the organizers' activities.

Officers of the United Cannery Union displayed a copy of an extra edition of one Cambridge paper, just received, bearing across the top of the first page a four-line banner, reading:

"Cambridge Now Overrun With Paid Professional Agitators; Shall They be Permitted to Wipe Out the Jobs of Our Workers and Seriously Jeopardize the Business and Welfare of Our City?"

Over long-distance telephone last night Mayor Charles Brohawn, of Cambridge, said he felt there was "nothing to" the reports of threatened trouble. He said he had not seen yesterday's papers in which the vigilance committee was said to have been called for, but declared there was no indication that any violence was contemplated.

Fred Jones, one of the C. I. O. organizers, said by phone that an effort had been under way for some time "to stir up the people against us." He said, however, that he felt most of those concerned were sympathetic to the C. I. O.'s organization efforts.

2,300 Work in Peak.

The Phillips company in peak times employs some 2,300 workers, it was said, but many recently have been dropped as the canning season waned.

Jones said that only about 700 or 800 now are at work, and charged that all those having any connection with the union had been dropped. The C. I. O. has signed 1,600 or 1,700 of the workers, he declared.

Jones asserted that a "company union" had been formed in the plant, known as the Cambridge Workers Union, and said that a charge to that effect had been filed with the NLRB.

The C. I. O. and American Federation of Labor organizers were said by Jones to be "working pretty much together," the A. F. of L. seeking to enroll the truck drivers and the C. I. O. endeavoring to sign all cannery workers.

New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia, formally accepting the nomination of the American Labor Party for re-election, declared last night Tammany Hall's political reign was ended.

"Whenever before did you see Tammany cringing on the ropes, down and out?" he demanded as labor supporters who packed Carnegie Hall shouted applause.

"We have not only got them worried, we have got them licked; they can't come back."

Wallace Urges 'Mild' Control Of Cotton Crop

3,000 Farmers Asked to Back New Bill and Processing Tax.

By the Associated Press.

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 1.—Secretary Wallace placed before 3,000 Southern farmers and agricultural leaders today a six-point permanent cotton program steering a course midway between rigid curtailment and unlimited production.

He challenged his audience to array their forces in its defense to enable the Cotton Belt "to earn a bigger income."

"The lines are already being drawn for and against the new farm legislation which will be needed to carry out" the program, he said.

The Secretary advised the agricultural South to unite with farmers elsewhere in seeking a new farm bill "that will serve the long-time welfare of agriculture and the Nation."

The ultimate solution to the complex cotton problem, he said, lies in continuance of a "moderate adjustment of production" such as would preserve the fertility of the soil and "still allow production of at least as much cotton as the markets of this and other countries have been accustomed to take."

Payments Planned.

"The United States intends to keep its place in the world cotton market," he said, by supplementing the market price with payments to co-operating farmers on an allotted cotton production goal, probably financed by a moderate processing tax to avoid the difficulty of getting "large subsidies from the general Treasury year after year."

"The processing tax on cotton in effect under the agricultural adjustment act," he said, "made the cotton programs nearly self-financing for two and a half years up to the time the Supreme Court nullified the tax and handed millions of dollars over to the processors."

Would Aid Sharecroppers.

A "middle course," he averred, offers the best hope for enabling the South to earn a bigger income. Increasing the income of the cotton belt, he said, would help solve the "sharecropper problem, and the problem of disease and lack of education among some groups, and almost every problem that has drawn the attention of reformer and sociologist to the South."

"Huge cotton crops and huge exports are a mockery if they do not mean a fair return to the producers," he said. "So are low crops and high prices if they fail to meet the need of the cotton farmer and those dependent upon him for enough money to feed, clothe and educate his family."

His "middle course," he said, would be:

1. Continue "such moderate adjustment of production as would preserve and build up the fertility of the soil" and still allow production of at least as much cotton as the markets could take.

2. Encourage greater consumption of cotton in ways that would raise the standards of living of all of our people.

3. Provide for increased production of home food and feed crops.

4. Serve notice to the world the United States intends to keep its place in the world market and supplement the market price with payments to co-operating farmers on an allotted production goal.

5. Provide authority for loans to prevent price collapse.

6. Provide authority for marketing quotas on the entire crop, to be used after a referendum of producers in time of emergency as a further protection against disaster from crushing surpluses.

Speech Approved.

Wallace took cognizance of a prospective 16,000,000-bale Southern crop, and 19,000,000-bale foreign crop, which he said would lead to a world carryover next August of from 17,000,000 to 18,000,000 bales.

Senator Hattie W. Carraway (Democrat), Arkansas, who heard the address, said the Secretary appeared to be "thinking along straight lines," but there were parts of the program she wanted to study.

Cully Cobb, of Atlanta, former Administration cotton chief, praised it as "the first official statement that definitely recognizes the international position the cotton producer occupies."

Subsidy Proposed.

By the Associated Press.

Aides of Representative Frank W. Hancock, of Oxford, N. C., disclosed yesterday a movement is under way to bring about payment of the 3-cent-a-pound cotton subsidy by December 1.

The subsidy is to be paid growers who pledge themselves to co-operate in any 1938 farm legislation.

Hancock's assistants made public a telegram from Representative B. Frank Whelchel, of Gainesville, Ga., asking aid in efforts to have the payments made this year instead of next as under present plans.

New Deal Sure To Win in '40, Says Copeland

Roosevelt, La Follete and Lewis on His Roll of Likely Candidates.

By the Associated Press.

One of the Administration's sharpest senatorial critics predicted reluctantly yesterday that "the New Deal" would win at the polls again in 1940.

Back in the Capital for the first time since he lost an anti-Administration campaign in the New York mayoralty primaries, Senator Copeland (Democrat), of New York, said:

"I think the New Deal is inevitable in its success in the next election, so far as we can see now. Unless we have a terrible crash, violent inflation or a big, unforeseen upheaval, the crowd will go right along in 1940.

Says New Party Needed.

Copeland's guess on "the New Deal's Presidential candidate" in 1940 was:

Doubts Coalition Effect.

He said he disliked to say that the New Deal would continue because it was contrary to his desires. But he said neither the Republican Party nor a coalition group could win at the polls as long as huge sums continue to pour from the Treasury.

Ickes Declares PWA Soon Will Be Dismantled

Dozen or Less Regional Offices to Replace 48 State Centers.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Ickes announced yesterday that the Public Works Administration soon will be partially dismantled.

He said the staff will be reduced as projects are completed and that the 48 State offices will be replaced by not more than a dozen regional offices. His associates said the seven regions proposed by Senator Norris (Independent), Nebraska, in his bill for a series of "little TVA's" will provide a rough basis.

Norris would divide the country according to these drainage basins:

The Tennessee Valley, the Atlantic seaboard, including the drainage area below the basin of the Suwanee along the Gulf of Mexico; the Great Lakes and Ohio Valley, the Missouri River Valley, the Arkansas River Valley, the southwestern section of the United States, south of the California-Oregon line, taking in the Great Basin area of Utah and northern Nevada, and the Columbia River Basin of the Pacific Northwest.

Officials did not estimate how many of the present 6,822 employes will be dropped. PWA's pay roll peak was 10,938 in April, 1936.

President Roosevelt announced recently that he will make no more major allotments of funds for PWA projects, but officials said construction is still at a high point. Many of the 1,200-odd projects allotted funds this summer are not yet under way. There are 2,980 projects, to cost $1,986,592,702, still under construction, contract or allotment.

He charged Hammond owed him the money for services rendered in 1931 in preparing a lawsuit.

Gardner did not explain why the President, who is to speak here Monday night, was to be subpenaed.

Girl Kills Mother, Brother and Self; Thought Family 'Against Her'

2 Bodies Found In Locked Auto Near Cemetery

Detroit Lawyer's Daughter Was Under Observation of Psychologist.

By the Associated Press.

Ann Arbor, Mich, Oct. 1.—A 22-year-old girl, who "thought the whole family was against her," shot and killed her mother and younger brother, Sheriff Jacob Andres decided tonight, then fatally wounded herself.

Ruth McHenry died in a Detroit hospital last night with a rifle bullet in her head.

Sheriff Andres said she apparently went to her parents' Detroit home yesterday after leaving the bodies of her mother, Mrs. Adele McHenry, 45, and her 7-year-old brother, Jimmy, in the McHenry automobile parked on a country road a mile from Ann Arbor.

Another brother, Donald, 14, arrived home from school soon after the girl. He was greeted by a shot from an upstairs room, the bullet grazing his head. He ran to a neighbor's for aid, then returned and found Ruth fatally shot in her room, a rifle beside her.

Stayed With Friends.

Sheriff's deputies who investigated an abandoned automobile parked near a cemetery this morning found the bodies of Mrs. McHenry and Jimmy, each shot through the head.

James G. McHenry, husband and father of the victims, is a Detroit attorney who maintains a summer home and farm near Ypsilanti.

For the past three months Ruth had stayed with Edward B. Greene, assistant professor of psychology at the University of Michigan, and Mrs. Greene. Greene said Ruth had been under observation in his home, and that she was "mentally sick."

Thought Family "Against Her."

"Yesterday noon," he said, "she left our home suddenly. I had understood that she was to meet her mother."

Marie McHenry, 27, another daughter who is a student in the University of Michigan Law School, said that because of Ruth's mental condition, "she thought the whole family was against her."

The death car was found locked and deputies towed it to Ann Arbar. The body of Mrs. McHenry was slumped under several cushions. The boy's body was under a robe.

A trail of blood nearly a half-mile long led from a point near the Ann Arbor city limits to the abandoned car, deputies said.

Sasscer Stresses Integrity of State

Baltimore, Oct. 1 (AP).—Lansdale G. Sasscer, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, declared tonight "the welfare, happiness and progress of a people is dependent upon the integrity and efficiency of its government."

Sasscer, president of the State senate added in an address prepared for delivery before the Govans Democratic Club.

"I have served both as an apprentice and journeyman in our State government and I fully realize the grave responsibilities in the many matters incident to our State government that the chief executive of this State must assume upon taking office.

"I am also aware of his obligation to co-operate with the national Administration in its efforts to solve the problems confronting us; in its efforts to foster and promote industry; to assist agriculture, and to prevent the exploitation of labor and to protect the aged."

Dictatorships Weak, Simon Warns Britons

London, Oct. 1 (AP).—Sir John Simon, formerly Great Britain's foreign secretary, today warned Britons against dictators.

"These new-fangled methods of totalitarian states may give the appearance of great solidarity, and no doubt it is very impressive to see millions of people marshaled like one man," Sir John declared, addressing the Scottish Liberal National Conference at Peebles. "But there is weakness in the very nature and philosophy of a dictator state from which we are free."

Parked Car Is Looted In Wave of Thefts Here

September Sets Safety Record; Autos Kill Two

Reduction Is 75 Per Cent From August, but the Year's Mark Is Bad.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Washington established a new record in traffic safety last month with a 75 per cent reduction in accident fatalities over August.

Two persons were killed in traffic during September, compared to eight the month before. Accidents dropped from 1,030 in August to 959 last month.

September saw adoption of a coordinated highway safety program. Precinct by precinct, renewed efforts to save lives extended to every corner of the city.

Year's Record Is Bad.

But in spite of encouraging results during September, the District's death list continues to mount over last year's record. At this time last year 61 persons had been killed. Thus far this year 72 have met death in mishaps—an increase of 11.

If fatalities increase at the present rate, Traffic Director Van Duzer declared, Washington's traffic dead will be well over 100 by the end of December.

Leaders of the school safety program announced yesterday that student safety units will be organized in all Washington high schools.

Units to be established throughout the public school system will be known as "Student Trafficlubs." Organization plans will begin Monday, with meetings in the various schools on successive days.

Plans for the "Trafficlubs" were completed yesterday. Student leaders of the movement include:

An 8-point program of activities was adopted at the organization meeting:

1. Study of bad traffic conditions within the school vicinity, to be followed by recommendations for improvement.
2. A campaign for traffic safety and driving courses for credit in all high schools.
3. Dramatic demonstrations on traffic safety and automobile operation.
4. Determination of students' driving capabilities, using A. A. A. testing equipment.
5. Sponsoring interscholastic contests for safety plays and radio scripts.
6. Presenting prize-winning safety plays at school assemblies.
7. Showing of safety films at "Trafficlub" meetings and school assemblies.
8. Sponsoring tours to observe traffic congestion and to become acquainted with the traffic bureau, license bureau and other agencies dealing with traffic or law enforcement.

According to police, Holman lost control of the motorcycle while driving near Maryland avenue and Fourteenth street northeast.

Three high school students, two from Arlington, were injured at Twentieth street and New Hampshire avenue northwest when their car struck a passenger bus operated by L. C. Porter, of the 3500 block Thirteenth street northwest. He was not held.

The three students, all of whom are at Emergency Hospital in undetermined condition, are Marshall Windsor, 16, of 646 Rinker street northwest, the driver; Edward Anderson, 15, of 915 North Danville street, Arlington; and Edna Davis, 16, of 939 North Kenmore street, Arlington. ## Weight of Press Against Black In Radio Plea

'Nomination Was a Tragic Blunder,' Says the New York Times.

Editorial comment on the speech of Justice Hugo L. Black last night covered as wide a gamut as did individual comment, as it was reported by the Associated Press, but in the minds of many the statement of the New York Times, independent Democratic newspaper, that "the nomination was a tragic blunder" headlined the press' attitude.

"Regardless of the present views he holds, and his affirmation of faith in the principles of religious and racial tolerance," said that organ, "it is a deplorable thing that a man who has ever taken the oath of allegiance in a sinister and destructive organization should now take his place on the highest court of justice in this country."

Other newspaper comment included the following:

New York Herald Tribune (Republican): "Mr. Justice Black's whole conduct since the charges of Klan membership were brought against him has been that of a coward . . . He has now added the vice of hypocrisy to his record of evasion . . . It is now for President Roosevelt to speak. The country has been patient and ready to believe that he acted hastily and without due knowledge."

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "His public repudiation of his former colleagues comes too late to justify his acceptance now as a member of the Supreme Court. He goes tagged to his judicial post. He ought to resign."

"Plea" Held Too Late.

Worcester, Mass., Telegram (Republican): "Hugo L. Black, newly created justice of the United States Supreme Court, last night made perhaps as good a plea in his own defense as could be made under the circumstances. But it remains the plea of a man who was caught with the goods."

Los Angeles Times—. . . He uttered words in conflict with established fact. And . . . he managed to contradict himself damningly. His prefatory statement concerning the importance of religious freedom and the invincibility of the guarantees in the bill of rights was well enough, and could be considered forthright and proper if his sincerity was not open to question.

The Newark (N. J.) Ledger: "Hugo Black made just as serious a mistake when he joined the Supreme Court as when he joined the Ku Klux Klan. He resigned from the Klan to mainatin an appearance of decency. He should resign from the Supreme Court to attain the substance of decency."

His Service Praised.

The Raleigh News and Observer (Democratic): "Most Americans will be prepared to forget a Klan membership six years behind a Senate service devoted to the welfare of all the people, white, black, Protestant, Catholic, Jew. It is too well known that many essentially good men foolishly aligned themselves with this now fortunately defunct organization."

Des Moines (Iowa) Register: "Justice Black's address . . . was the best statement he could have made under the circumstances. . . . It is, of course, only making the most of a bad situation.

"It does not abolish the record of his silence, his want of candor and his apparent lack of due sensitiveness when the Klan charges were made during the debate on confirmation."

"False Pretenses."

Boston Post (Independent Democrat): "One who associates with bigots, bids for their support, takes the bigots' oath and then is so craven that he allows his friends in a crisis to deny it all, can't clear himself . . . by asserting it was all contrary to his real character.

"Justice Black has pleaded guilty. Had he made these admissions before, he would neither have been appointed nor confirmed. Thus he gained one of the highest positions in the land by false pretenses. . . . He should resign."

Lewiston (Me.) Sun (Independent): "It is of mighty little consequence whether Justice Black ever belonged to the Ku Klux Klan, or belonged to it while he was Senator, or belongs to it now, as a member of the Supreme Court, but it is of tremendous consequence that a Senator with the record of Senator Black could possibly get appointed to the Supreme Court of the United States."

The Leopard's Spots.

Buffalo, N. Y., Courier-Express (Independent) said: "Senator Black once said on the floor of the Senate:

" 'Show me the kind of steps a man made in the sand five years ago and I will show you the kind of steps he is likely to make in the same sand five years hence. Show me the course he was pursuing then and, unless there has been a cataclysm which has absolutely changed his character, I will show you the course he is going to follow in the future.'

" . . . with this we think the case against Mr. Justice Black can be closed—for the present—with the hope that for him the cataclysm has happened."

Mrs. Roosevelt Evades Comment on Justice

Asked as she stepped from the plane whether she would listen tonight to Justice Hugo L. Black's radio address, she replied: "I haven't the remotest idea what I'm going to do tonight."

Mrs. Roosevelt was accompanied by Mayris Chaney, a blonde dancer, who boarded the plane at Chicago. Miss Chaney said she had known Mrs. Roosevelt for some time and would probably go to Washington with her later.

A Fish-Bowl Dancer Knocks On Door of 'Doyle's Harem'

Did They Paint Town Together? Yes, Says Press Agent; No, Says Mystery Man; French Opens Delphine's Door for Judith's Summons.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Oct. 1.—The shapely figure of a fish-bowl dancer flitted backstage (apparently by proxy) tonight among other new characters in the diverting real life production of "The Loves of Jack Doyle."

Scene 1 of the current act consisted of denials, also by proxy, by both Doyle, the Irish troubador of Fistiana, and Mrs. Delphine Dodge Cromwell Baker Godde, his very rich fiancee, of the charges contained in the alienation of affections suit filed against Mrs. Godde yesterday by Judith Allen, actress, who charged Mrs. Godde had stolen the love of Doyle, which she considered worth $2,000,000. Still on the stage, but getting into the background was . . .

Elinor Troy, who dances seminude in a fish bowl. She seemingly got into the scrambled drama by benefit of her press agent, although he insists she is a good friend of Doyle and that "they spent a very pleasant evening together." That Doyle was with the beauteous Miss Troy was denied by . . .

J. B. Bac-So, who described himself as a friend of Doyle and Mrs. Godde. Waiting for her cue was the French actress . . .

Jeanne Manet, who arrived in town today, said in Hollywood to have been Doyle's heart interest last year. Resting from his labors was . . .

Alfred T. Benton, one of the six process servers who camped on Mrs. Godde's doorstep until early this morning. He spoke French to Mrs. Godde's French butler, got him to open the door and then, he said, served the summons in Miss Allen's suite.

Copeland Begs Labor to Avoid 'Brute Force'

Senator Addresses Identity Experts, Upholds Right to Strike.

Calling on organized labor to use only peaceful means in negotiating with capital, Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), of New York, told delegates to the International Association for Identification yesterday that the use of "brute force" in labor strife "should bring the blush of shame to the face of every man having to do with labor relations."

"Under no circumstances," he said, "should there be destruction of property, or physical danger to life or limb."

The right of labor to strike and picket was readily recognized by Copeland.

"I believe in the labor union," he said. "If I were a working man I should sit in the front seat of the union."

He recalled that in a recent survey in New York statistics showed that 140 out of 249 manufacturers were leaving the city because of racketeering in business and labor. If these evils are to be eradicated, he explained, police must be given a more important part in the war against crime.

"To my mind," he said, "there is no doubt that an untrammeled police force is the surest guarantee of law enforcement and the maintenance of community safety."

Copeland said he was opposed to the merger of major Federal law-enforcement agencies because "the present system appears to be entirely satisfactory."

Politicians and legislators, in many cases, were blamed by Richard J. Lyons, State representative of Illinois, for the weakness of the State parole system.

Fingerprinting Urged.

"I am unalterably opposed," he stated, "to politically appointed parole boards which sell paroles to dangerous criminals like fish in the market."

Decrying the deplorable situation in this regard in his own State, Lyons said:

"In the State of Illinois, we have had more sex crimes and killings by paroled brutes during the past year than ever before in the history of our State, yet the parole board is actually turning them out faster than the police can apprehend and the courts convict them."

Congressional legislation which would require every person in the United States to register his fingerprints was urged by Edward A. Parker, of the Memphis, Tenn., police department. Parker suggested that the Nation's citizens could be fingerprinted simultaneously with the taking of the 1940 census.

F. B. I. Gives Party.

Citing the work of J. Edgar Hoover and his G-Men as the "chief contribution to law and order in recent times," Edward P. Mulrooney, New York State commissioner of correction, lauded the F. B. I.'s director as "our American youth's hero."

"Capturing the imagination of the youth," Mulrooney said, "is of utmost importance in crime prevention. They must have a hero. It used to be the gangster, outwitting the police. Now it's the G-Men."

Last night the delegates were entertained by the F. B. I. Athletic Association at a "Gay Nineties" party at the Willard oHtel.

This morning they will attend the graduation exercises of the sixth session of the F. B. I. National Police Academy. Later, J. Edgar Hoover and other members of the I. A. I. will take part in a round-table discussion which will be broadcast over WJSV from 12 to 12:30 p. m. today. The topic will be "A Discussion of Criminal Identifiction in the Apprehension and Suppression of Criminals and Crime and the Relation to American Citizens."

Sit-Downers Move Out After a Brief Scuffle

Detroit, Oct. 1 (AP).—Striking employes of the Detroit Gasket & Manufacturing Co. fought briefly with non-strikers today and then abandoned a sit-down and peaceably left the plant when police mobilized mounted squads to open a way for entrance for the non-strikers massed outside.

Madrid, Oct. 1 (AP).—The crew of the Soviet steamer Komsomol, which was shelled and burned in the Mediterranean last November, was reported today to have been exchanged for aviators held prisoner by the Spanish republican government.

Ludkes Honor Flag, but Still Evade Salute

Six Children, Barred From School, Show Respect for Banner.

In an idyllic setting, with cows in the nearby pasture mooing an obligatto, Mr. and Mrs. August Ludke and the six little Ludkes raised an American flag yesterday—but they did not salute it.

Just a year ago the six children were barred from Oxon Hill, Md., consolidated school because they refused to salute the standard on the ground such ceremony conflicted with the family's religious principles. Ludke, an employe of the Washington postoffice, is a member of the Jehovah's Witnesses sect.

But the short, bespectacled postal worker has contended that he and his have the deepest respect for the flag, so yesterday the family dedicated a 27-foot homemade flagstaff in front of their Silver Hill, Md., cottage and hoisted Old Glory.

Children Put God First.

"My children," he said, "put God first and so they were put out of school. I have not attempted to have them reinstated this term. We had two tutors for them all last year, one giving a business course and the other teaching the younger ones, and we are going to do the same thing this year."

The neatly whitewashed flag pole is planted in the Ludkes' front yard. Inscribed in the circular cement base are the words, "Kingdom School," and the initials of the six children. They are Ruth, 16; Frances, 14; Fred, 13; Anna Louise, 11; Walter, 10, and Esther, 8.

The children also placed their fingerprints in the cement, which still was soft when the ceremonies took place. Gathered for the occasion, besides the entire family and a corps of reporters and photographers, were Mrs. Ludke's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ruppert, and several neighbors.

Rutherford's Voice Heard.

After the flag had been hoisted Ludke asked if anyone objected to his playing a phonograph record of Judge Rutherford's voice and, there being no dissent, he brought a portable machine to the porch.

Judge Rutherford, head of the Jehovah's Witnesses sect, said that saluting a flag is contrary to God's law because it implies adoration. A flag, he said, is an image and to worship it is positively wrong.

There were two sides to the record, but the children sprawled on the grass and listened attentively during the entire discourse.

Suit Asks $3,000 For Illness Laid to Chocolate Eclairs

Damages of $3,000 were demanded of the Dutch Baker Boy, Inc., 811 Monroe street northeast, in Municipal Court yesterday because of the illness of three persons who said they had eaten "poisoned" chocolate eclairs September 23.

The petitioner, Ernest M. Linthicum, 111 New York avenue, Takoma Park, Md., said his wife had purchased a small quantity of eclairs. They were eaten, he said, by himself and two of his daughters, Frances May, 20, and Virginia Louise, 17.

Through Attorney James R. Kirkland, the father asked for $1,000 for his illness and like amount for each of his daughters. Eating of the pastry caused severe gastric disturbances, the suits alleged.

China Overrides Britain and France, Calls for Sanctions Against Japan

U. S. Observer Will Act With League Group

Koo Condemns Foe's Bomb Attacks; Resolution to Sub-Committee.

By the United Press.

Geneva, Oct. 1.—China today overrode Anglo-French objections and demanded the League of Nations advisory committee take action which would bind 52 world powers to impose economic sanctions upon Japan.

Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo presented on China's behalf a resolution condemning Japan's warfare as "constituting a case of external aggression against a member of the League of Nations under Article X of the Covenant."

The 27-nation advisory committee immediately delegated it to a 12-power sub-committee, of which the United States will be an observer. Leland Harrison, United States Minister to Switzerland, has been sitting with the advisory committee as a nonvoting participant.

Other members of the sub-committee are Great Britain, France, Russia, Australia, Belgium, China, New Zealand, Ecuador, the Netherlands, Poland and Sweden.

If the League, through the advisory committee and later through its General Assembly, should vote favorably on China's resolution, member states would be required to proceed with measures for the aid of China—including economic sanctions which the League failed to make effective against Italy during the Ethiopian crisis.

New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—A boycott of Japanese products by the American buying public was demanded tonight by Dr. Harry F. Ward, professor of Christian ethics at Union Theological Seminary, at a mass meeting of 15,000 in Madison Square Garden.

The meeting was under the auspices of the American League Against War and Fascism and the American Friends of the Chinese People. Joseph Curran, general organizer of the National Maritime Union, pledged the support of organized marine labor to the plan designed to halt the Japanese invasion of China.

William E. Dodd, American Ambassador to Germany, was to have been guest of honor, but was unable to attend.

Wyo. Aide Refuses To Help Campaign Against O'Mahoney

Kemmerer, Wyo., Oct. 1 (AP).—State Senator Platte Wilson said today he refused to distribute copies of a speech by Senator Joseph Guffey of Pennsylvania which threatened Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney of Wyoming, and other Democrats who opposed President Roosevelt's court reorganization plan with "election trouble."

Wilson said copies of the speech and a letter signed by R. H. Bailey, as Senator Guffey's secretary, came to him early this week. The letter, Wilson said, explained the copies of the address were "for distribution to any of your Democratic friends whom you think would be interested in reading same."

He said his letter of reply to Bailey read in part: "I think it is poor politics and if you wish to assure the election of a Republican Senator three years from now I would advise the continuation of your meddling in Wyoming affairs."

American Killed In Greek Air Crash

Athens, Greece, Oct. 1 (AP).—John Raymond Henderson, an American, and two other persons lost their lives today when the British Imperial Airways flying boat Courtier sank in landing on Phaieron Bay.

Wing Commander D. Acland, of the British air froce, and a Greek citizen were the other victims.

Soviet Speeds Up Purge of Traitors

Moscow, Oct. 1 (AP).—A drastic decree to speed up the Soviet's purge of "counter-revolutionary wreckers and diversionists" was made public today. ## Duchess of Windsor Abandons Wallis Blue

Paris, Oct. 1 (AP).—"Wallis Blue" went by the board today. New clothes chosen by the Duchess of Windsor were black, brown and red. Only one costume, probably for old times' sake, struck the familiar blue note. It was a traveling ensemble in navy blue woolen.

Japanese Lied To Bomb City, Yarnell Says

Denies U.S. Evacuated Hankow; Augusta Menaced in Chinese Air Raid.

Chinese news agency said the warning would be based on the grounds several Japanese planes raiding Nanking recently were shot down when they flew low to avoid damaging foreign property.

[In Shanghai, sailors on the United States flagship Augusta were summoned to battle stations as Chinese airplanes staged four desperate raids on Japanese positions in the International Settlement, the United Press reported.

[The raids followed Japanese claims they had captured the strategic Chinese city of Liuhang, northwest of the settlement, and broken the Chinese advanced lines in other places.—Editor's note.]

Chinese defenders of Shanghai sent back word from their pillbox trenches tonight that they were holding their own and counter-attacking Japanese in some sectors.

They told of routing Japanese troops in the vicinity of Kiangwan, north of Shanghai. Japanese admitted the Kiangwan civic center buildings had been evacuated, but said their lines to the rear were unchanged.

China's military affairs commission at Nanking declared Japan's North China forces "massacred" 200 wounded Chinese soldiers following Japanese capture of Tsangchow, south of Tientsin, September 25.

Japanese asserted their casualties in five weeks of Shanghai fighting totaled 7,530 men, of which 1,893 were killed in action. The report did not include naval losses. Chinese casualties, Japanese estimated, were 20,000 killed and 35,000 wounded.

Shanghai's cholera epidemic increased at the rate of 100 cases a day, with nearly 2,000 known cases among Chinese living in the International Settlement. A total of 504 deaths was reported in the last few days.

U. S. Gunboats Bottled Up.

London, (Saturday) Oct. 2 (U.P.).—The London Daily Express' Nanking correspondent reported today six American gunboats, the entire British Yangtze flotilla and six French gunboats have been bottled up in the Yangtze River by sunken Chinese junks. The Chinese moved junks loaded with rock and debris out into the Yangtze and sank them. The barrier has formed a river "boom" blocking navigation from the upper river.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Oct. 1.—In a sharply worded statement apparently aimed directly at Great Britain, the Japanese foreign office reiterated tonight Japan will not stand for third-party mediation of its conflict with China.

At the same time criticism of Britain was increasing in the Japanese press.

A foreign office spokesman hinted strongly Japan regards British influence at Geneva as responsible for the League of Nations condemning Japanese bombardment of cities in China.

"We desire to make clear that we do not think mediation is called for at the present stage of affairs," the spokesman asserted. "We will unswervingly and unflinchingly pursue a settled policy. If any power wants to mediate, let her first acquire a full appreciation of our aims and aspirations."

At the same time, the Tokyo paper Nichi Nichi came out editorially with a claim the British are supplying arms to China from Hongkong.

From the naval ministry came the admission Japanese warships were responsible for attacks on Chinese junks off the South China Coast.

(Hongkong reports for days have been telling of Japanese submarines and surface warships systematically sinking the Chinese fishing fleets in those waters. Scores of junks were sunk by shells.)

The naval ministry said the warships acted in self-defense, explaining that some junks were armed. They claimed these weapons were used resisting inspectors from Japanese vessels.

British Seize Arab Chiefs to Quiet Palestine

office as head of the Arab higher committee, which has demanded Arab supremacy in the Holy Land. The terrorism which broke out when Britain four months ago proposed to partition Palestine into separate Jewish and Arab states, with a third part remaining under British mandate, reached a climax last Sunday with the assassination of the British commissioner of Galilee and his bodyguard.

The British drive against new outbreaks started before dawn when houses of Arab leaders were surrounded and searched. Dr. Hussein Kjalidi, Jerusalem mayor, and Fuad Saba, secretary of the higher committee, were reported arrested and taken aboard the British cruiser Sussex.

Telephone lines were disconnected. Censorship was imposed. Automobiles were searched.

Tension spread throughout Palestine. One Arab was killed, British said, when he refused to halt at a sentry's challenge. Authorities foresaw the possibility of more serious trouble and adopted all possible precautions.

Deprived of Post.

Action against the Mufti, who has received a $3,000 annual salary from the British government as an appointive official, deprived him of the presidency of the supreme Moslem council.

Authorities explained that they found it necessary to take action against persons "whose activities have been prejudicial to the maintenance of public security."

The action followed British rejection of Arab demands for the release of 200 prisoners held in connection with the slaying Sunday of Commissioner Lewis Andrews and Constable Peter McEwan.

An official deportation order was issued against five members of the Arab higher committee. Those listed for deportation were Khalidi, Saba, Jamal Effendi Husseini, head of the Arab party; Jacoub Hussein, head of the Moslem Youth Association, and Ahmed Hilmi Pasha, manager of the Arab Bank.

Lewis Praises, Glass Assails Justice Black

Sentiment of Leaders Still Mixed After Speech Clarifying Stand.

I don't think so now. He said nothing that changed my conception of what should be the type of person appointed to the Supreme Court."

Fellow justices on the Supreme Court had no comment on the unusual address.

Other comment:

Senator Thomas (Democrat), Utah: "I think we ought to take him at his word and accept it 100 per cent."

Representative Bloom (Democrat), New York: "It seems to me we are as much in the fog as ever."

Representative May (Democrat), Kentucky: "The speech was very appropriate and extremely gratifying to me. It shows Justice Black is neither intolerant nor prejudiced in either religious or social matters I think the whole Nation will accept it gladly."

Drop Subject, Borah Urges.

Boise, Idaho, Oct. 1 (AP).—Senator William E. Borah said tonight "Nothing is to be gained by the discussion" of Associate Justice Hugo Black's one-time membership in the Ku Klux Klan and he expressed the hope "the subject will be dropped."

The Republican dean of the Senate issued his statement after reading the text of Black's address.

Wheeler Commends Black.

Los Angeles, Calif., Oct. 1 (AP).—Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, leader of the anticourt bill fight, tonight said "I think the (Black) speech was a fine explanation."

O'Mahoney Satisfied.

Los Angeles, Oct. 1 (U.P.).—Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, a leading opponent of President Roosevelt's judiciary reform program, tonight accepted as satisfactory Justice Hugo L. Black's explanation of past Ku Klux Klan affiliations.

Wizard Evans Lauds Black.

Atlanta, Oct. 1 (AP).—Dr. Hiram Evans, imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, said after listening to Justice Black's radio address tonight, "He has a judicial mind—he'll make a great judge on the bench."

Dr. Evans said the justice's chronology of events in his life was "as I thought they were. I've been trying to tell folks that card (membership) didn't mean a thing."

"I thought it was a very sincere speech. His concept of religious and political freedom is sound Americanism. What he said about the races is sound, too."

Van Nuys "Very Happy."

Indianapolis, Oct. 1 (AP).—Senator Frederick Van Nuys (Democrat), Indiana, said tonight after hearing Associate Justice Hugo L. Black's reply to criticism of Ku Klux Klan membership:

"In my opinion, the incident will now close."

Should Satisfy Critics"

Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 1 (U.P.).—Sen. John K. Bankhead, (Democrat), Alabama, said tonight Justice Hugo L. Black's radio address "should satisfy all of his critics."

Up to Black, Says Bar Head.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 1 (U.P.).—If Justice Hugo Black deems that the evidence indicates he should take his seat on the Supreme Court, others should not contradict him, Frederick H. Stinchfield, retiring president of the American Bar Association, said tonight. There is no appeal, Stinchfield added.

New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—Jeremiah T. Mahoney, Democratic candidate for mayor of New York City, said after the Justice Black speech: "In my opinion, membership in the Ku Klux Klan, and belief or adherence to its principles, disqualify anyone for public office and particularly for judicial office. A judge must be impartial and without any prejudice based upon race, creed or color. I feel positive, however, that had the President of the United States known of Judge Black's membership in the Klan, he never would have made the nomination."

7 Great Lakes Ships Tied Up By C.I.O. Strike

Sit-Downs Protest Closed Shop Agreement With A. F. L. Seamen.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Oct. 1.—Seven Great Lakes package freighters were tied up today by the first seamen's strike in this area in 26 years.

Members of the C. I. O.-affiliated National Maritime Union staged sit-down strikes aboard vessels of the Great Lakes Transit Corporation, of Buffalo, N. Y., in protest against a closed shop agreement between the line and the A. F. of L. International Seamen's Union.

The C. I. O. organization filed charges of unfair labor practices with the Labor Relations Board at Buffalo and announced the line's four other freighters would be affected upon reaching port unless a C. I. O. contract was substituted for the A. F. of L. agreement.

The charges were based on the contention the N. M. U. represents a majority of the line's unlicensed seamen and that the company signed the A. F. of L. pact while negotiations with the C. I. O. were pending.

Lewis J. Brosman, Cleveland agent, said counsel for the company was considering possible Federal court action against the strikers under the mutiny statute, but M. Headley Stone, N. M. U. president, said:

"I don't expect anything to come of that. As I understand the mutiny act, it applies only on the high seas. These ships are in port."

Brosman said 20 men were involved in the initial sit-down aboard the H. A. Scandrett here. "The men are at their posts and everything is peaceful, but they won't move the boat," he added.

Othe affected ships were the Patrick E. Crowley and W. W. Atterbury, in dock at Buffaol; the W. J. Conners, at South Chicago; the E. W. Chambers and J. M. Davis, at Duluth, Minn., and the Duluth, at Milwaukee.

Bar Asks Rule For Hearings on New Justices

Lawyers to Petition Senate, Omit Reference to Black.

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, Oct. 1.—The American Bar Association late today adopted a resolution calling for full and public Senate hearings on the fitness of judicial nominees, as a compromise to efforts for a specific expression on the Justice Black question.

Robert Lee Tullis, 73, former Louisiana law dean, again attempted from the floor to press the specific question of Justice Black, but was ruled out of order.

The resolution said:

"Resolved that the American Bar Association petition the Senate of the United States to establish a rule requiring every nomination for judicial office to be referred to an appropriate committee and providing that such committee in every instance afford a full hearing upon matters touching the fitness and qualification of the nominee for the judicial office."

Chairman L. B. Day, of the resolutions committee, said the committee accidentally avoided the word "public" and took responsibility for including the word.

The resolution made no reference to Tullis' efforts to have the association investigate Justice Black and his attempt to get an expression that membership in a secret, oath-bound organization is incompatible with membership in the Supreme Court.

Floyd Smith, arrested soon after the child was found, denied from his cell in Henrico County Jail that he had attacked her.

Validity of HOLC Upheld, Fletcher Convicted of Entry

Constitutionality of the HOLC in part was upheld in police jury court yesterday when Edmund Fletcher, former aide to the Attorney General in the Coolidge and Harding administrations, was found guilty of illegal entry. The case was continued for sentence.

Fletcher said that he had received a quit claim to a house in the 4100 block of Military road about six months ago, the day before the HOLC was to foreclose a mortgage on the property. When lawyers from the Government attempted to foreclose, Fletcher refused to turn over the property, claiming the HOLC was not validly established.

Thursday Judge John P. McMahon refused a motion for a directed verdict of not guilty, indicating belief in the constitutionality of the organization.

Drastic Steps To Prop Franc Drafted in Paris

Chautemps Would Drop 40-Hour Week, Forbid Sit-Downs.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Oct. 1.—Premier Camille Chautemps has drafted a program to strengthen the franc, informed sources said tonight, and will demand unanimous ministerial support for it tomorrow. It was reported he would force the resignation of the cabinet if the support was not given.

A day of swift parleying between Chautemps' radical-Socialist ministers and the Socialist followers of former Premier Leon Blum produced the program which included:

1. Abandonment of the 40-hour week, where found necessary, to increase industrial production.
2. "Surveillance," but not control, of foreign exchange to check speculation; and
3. Prohibition of sit-down strikes to increase the confidence of employers to go ahead with expand- of business plans.

The Socialist ministers conferred with Leon Jouhaux, France's No. 1 labor leader, before reaching what was said to be substantial agreement with Chautemps.

Sources close to the ministers said Chautemps was almost certain to win approval before the markets open Monday.

Labor In Politics.

The C. I. O. leaders have shown questionable judgment in making their first major bid for political power in Detroit—a city with an outstanding record for good government under nonpartisan administrations.

If the municipal government were dominated by a political machine operated for the sake of spoils, or if it had a reputation for not playing fair with labor, there would at least be a good excuse for the organized automobile workers to seek to capture the city hall. Whether such a development is socially desirable under actual conditions is debatable. With minor exceptions, a municipal government has certain definite functions to perform. It is not concerned with carrying out policies which favor any particular class or group within the community. With decent administration it offers equal protection to all, and performs certain services for all without fear or favoritism.

Under its nonpartisan charter Detroit has acquired a reputation as one of the best-governed cities in the country. Hence, it would appear to be a retrograde movement for local unions to introduce partisanship by pushing forward labor-indorsed candidates for office.

The strength of an efficient nonpartisan regime lies in the support given to it by all good citizens, regardless of their economic or social affiliations. That will not be accorded if elected officials are pledged to carry out policies defined for them by labor unions. When they submit to dictation, they forfeit their right to be regarded as nonpartisan. It is quite different when they accept the unsolicited support of labor organizations because their own independent policies are approved.

Apart from the larger issues raised by the Detroit situation, it is doubtful whether the automobile workers are following a wise policy, viewed from a purely selfish standpoint. The C. I. O. has gathered in thousands of workers who are untrained and undisciplined. It would seem tactically much wiser for the leaders to consolidate these gains in the industrial field before they undertake to make political conquests.

If the C. I. O. candidates for municipal office should be victorious and if the city were disappointed with the new regime, a political victory might prove to be a real setback to the progress of unionization. And in this Detroit is as backward as it is politically advanced.

Nearing A Showdown.

Although, at the moment, incapable of exerting any material force, the League of Nations continues to serve effectively as the voice and conscience of a large part of the world community. Evidence of this is to be found in the strong resolution adopted by the current Assembly concerning the situation in Spain.

Some days ago the Assembly placed itself on record in sharp condemnation of Japan's aerial warfare in China. Now that same body has spoken out strongly against the sorry farce of nonintervention in Spain. Thursday's resolution, in fact, flatly declared that the London committee has been a failure. It demanded a speedy withdrawal of foreign troops from Spain and the end of foreign intervention in the affairs of that harassed nation. It even hinted broadly that an end to all pretense of nonintervention would be preferable to ineffective continuation of that policy.

The significance of this action is twofold. It reveals the fact that the League in transferring the Spanish problem from Geneva to London did not permanently wash its hands of that problem. With the London committee incapable of achieving constructive action, the League proposes to recall its mandate to that body. And, what is more, the League's stiffening attitude on the Spanish problem occurs at a time when the attitude of Great Britain and France is also stiffening.

There appears to be little doubt that the two great democracies are now planning to put considerable pressure on Italy to withdraw her troops from Spain. Foreign Minister Delbos of France has, in fact, warned Italy that refusal to do so may compel the French government to open the French border to volunteers and supplies for loyalist Spain.

This threat Italy cannot ignore. But from the French point of view the opening of the French border is a move whose potential dangers would be minimized if it were part of a concerted effort by League nations to find a constructive solution of the Spanish problem. Should France find it necessary to carry out its threat it would do so with the moral support of the League of Nations and would, even in a real sense, be carrying out the League's suggestions.

To Clarify Relief Policy.

A wide field of potential usefulness and public service stretches ahead of the Senate's "Special Committee to Investigate Unemployment and Relief," for the investigations of which a good deal of intelligent spade work has already been accomplished. With the return of its chairman, Senator Byrnes, to Washington, following his first-hand studies of European relief systems, it may be expected that the lines of inquiry will soon begin to take definite shape.

This preliminary consideration will probably prove the most important part of the whole undertaking. If the plan of campaign is intelligently drawn, with limited though definite objectives, the investigations will undoubtedly lead to concrete findings of a very practical nature. But if the scope of inquiry is vague and shadowy the results will follow the same pattern. The preparation of the agenda is therefore of the first importance.

Mr. Alan Johnstone, counsel for the Senate investigation, has already drafted a tentative program, presumably designed primarily as a starting point for the committee's work. While these suggestions are, of course, subject to later revision, there is one which should clearly be allowed to stand in substantially its present wording. That is "the historical entry of the United States into the relief business, and the underlying objectives" of the relief program.

Just because national unemployment relief policy is at present by no means clear, a full examination of the objectives sought will be essential to substantial progress in more detailed aspects of the inquiry. It is a matter of history that the country had no adequate relief program at the onset of the depression and that various procedures, often conflicting in principle and overlapping in operation, had to be hurriedly thrown together to meet the emergency. What is uncertain is how much of the present program should be retained as a part of permanent policy. And this cannot be scientifically determined until the question of "underlying objectives" is answered.

The need for clarification here is attested by the widely varying policies of different governmental agencies now operating in the field of unemployment relief.

The WPA, for instance, has proceeded on the assumption that the Federal Government should provide as many unemployed as possible with work, though as an emergency rather than as a permanent program. The old-age insurance system, on the other hand, makes the Federal Government permanently responsible for benefits to the aged, thereby seeking to keep them off the relief rolls in future.

Unemployment insurance, however, is regarded as rather more definitely a State function, with the Federal Government supplementing local efforts to keep the competent unemployed worker from becoming a public charge while he is seeking work. The United States Employment Service also seeks to co-ordinate State and Federal efforts to make it easy for jobseekers to find satisfactory employment, without delay and without any charge to the applicant for its services.

These and other agencies have been developed in rather haphazard fashion, lacking centralization of either policy or direction. Often there is no clear division of function between what is a Federal and what a State responsibility, and sometimes there is duplication in the work of the agencies, both Federal and State. Under the circumstances it is not surprising that there has been so much waste motion, and consequent extravagance, in relief outlays.

While this confusion may have been excusable at the height of the depression its continuation in the future would be intolerable from every viewpoint. For that reason the emphasis on "underlying objectives" in the tentative agenda of the Senate committee is encouraging. It shows that this body intends to define policy before it recommends a program. Construction of any kind is likely to be successful in the degree to which it is based on firm, well-planned foundations.

Successful Endeavor.

The inglorious defeat of Endeavour II in the recent America's Cup races is somewhat more than offset by the epic transatlantic passage just completed by its pacemaker, Endeavour I. The former lost in competition with another yacht. The latter won in a far more gripping contest with the ocean, in which the stakes were no mere silver trophy, but life itself.

For days after she was separated from her escort off the New England coast Endeavour I went unreported. Many thought that the weight of the broken towline had sunk the frail racing craft. Others deemed it impossible that she could weather the equinoctial gales and reach her home port under sail. But yesterday Endeavour I came home unaided, with all her crew and all her gear intact. No successful cup contender ever drew heartier acclaim.

It was deserved. Man battled with nature long before he learned to design cups to be awarded in sporting competitions. And in these elemental contests he learned the virtues of courage, coolness and comradeship which are today synonymous with sportsmanship. Endeavour I, not even a contender off Newport, returns with laurels which no speedier yacht will ever be able to take away.

The Cost Of Defense.

"Under pain of general financial catastrophe," Finance Minister Bonnet says in a preamble to his budget bill for 1938, "Europe may be forced to seek an agreement on disarmament."

The warning testifies to the anxiety with which M. Bonnet regards the prospect of continued international chaos, necessitating severe drains upon the French treasury. After his energetic efforts to cut ordinary expenditures and to reduce extraordinary deficits in the budget by such measures as an amalgamation of the railways, it must be discouraging to be confronted by demands for continually increasing defense outlays.

Warnings of financial catastrophe, in default of limitation of armaments, unfortunately carry little weight these days. If a nation, rightly or wrongly, believes that its political security is threatened, it will be willing to spend millions for defense whether it can afford the outlay or not.

In the modern state, with its highly developed financial machinery, funds for carrying on destructive wars or making costly preparations for defense may be obtained in many ways. When the taxable capacity of the people is fully exploited, borrowing can be resorted to. When investment support fails, inflation, open or disguised, may furnish the sinews of war. There is no definite upper limit to the spending program, indeed, unless the people rebel against the deprivations caused by diverting surplus income to destructive uses.

That was demonstrated during the great war, and it is strikingly illustrated by the more recent experiences of Italy, Germany and Japan. All these nations have financed heavy armaments programs and one is now waging a war under great financial handicaps. Their success is due largely to the ability of authoritarian governments to force public co-operation in the execution of their plans and to finance them in any way that seems expedient at the moment.

France, however, is a democracy. There, as in all governments run by and for the people, those in power must constantly consider what the electorate is willing to endure. The elimination of deficits is essential to attract investment support. But it is extremely difficult to retrench without alienating other groups and risking political defeat. The task is made all the harder by a mounting burden of defense costs which adds to an already staggering debt load.

Of course, the defense program is only one of the problems harassing the present French government. The overvaluation of the franc has created maladjustments of long standing that call for drastic treatment. The heavily adverse trade balance, the rapidly rising level of costs and prices, and the resultant labor unrest all militate against recovery of the franc. In consequence, French capital is fearful and stays out of the country, despite the government's effort to restore confidence.

The recent sharp drop in the franc has not solved any of France's pressing problems, and the heavy discount on forward exchange indicates that further declines are expected. So long as uncertainty exists regarding the level at which the franc will be finally stabilized, the road traveled by Finance Minister Bonnet and his successors is likely to be paved with good intentions incapable of realization.

A stable currency and a tranquil political atmosphere are needed to lure French capital out of hiding and provide needed investment support for a moderate borrowing program. Yet these requisites are almost unobtainable as long as the constant threat of war persists.

Nostalgia.

There's scarcely a nip in the air yet. But sweaters are already being pressed into service and even in the closet summer clothing begins to look a trifle self-conscious. Furs are being retrieved from storage. And while one silver fox does not make a fall, it does serve as an effective scout for old Jack Frost. Leaves are turning, nights fall faster, and the parks of Washington begin to be splashed with color. But, alas, the District misses out on the best autumnal feature of all—State fair.

Prize pigs, blue ribbon preserves and the tallest cornstalk in 20 counties are as much a part of autumn as a ripening pumpkin. Several years ago Phil Strong put all this down in words which were later crystallized in a movie. But the State fair is an autumnal harbinger which scarcely needed this publicity. For anyone who ever went through a turnstile to take in the sideshows and exhibitions could never forget the experience. Crystal gazers, weight-guessers and strength-challengers vied with cotton candy, sulky race, and diving horses. Fireworks at night were the final fillip to a wearisome but completely satisfying day.

Fall is a time for launching new fashions, new fur get-ups and new-fangled ideas of all kinds. Perhaps some enterprising cosmetician will some day give us a real fall novelty—Parfum du State Fair—distilled from the essence of burning leaves.

A bunch of Senators are in Hawaii considering the advisability of admitting the islanders to statehood. One large school of thought holds that inasmuch as various conditions with this nation are already considerably shaky, it would be unwise at this time to admit the Hawaiians.

The Wheeler Amendment.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It was reported in the papers of September 25 that Senator Wheeler, for whose splendid fight to preserve the independence and integrity of the judiciary the country should ever be grateful, favors a constitutional amendment which will permit Congress "to override the Supreme Court's veto by a two-thirds vote just as it can override the veto of the President."

As matters now stand, such an amendment would be a great misfortune. There is a marked and clear distinction between the exercise by a President of his constitutional power to veto an act of Congress, the enactment of which was within the powers delegated to it by the Constitution, and a determination by the Supreme Court of whether such an act exceeds the constitutional limitations upon the legislative branch of the Government.

Had such an "amendment" been in effect, the successful fight which was made by Senator Wheeler and his associates would have been foredoomed to failure. So long as it is possible for an "Executive" or any other extraneous influence to reward or punish a member of Congress for the manner in which he exercises his vote, just so long will it be before representative government is restored to the country. Among such rewards and punishments is, of course, the use of the controllable voter in swaying elections to Congress.

The root of the matter is in the suffrage. The only limitations upon it applicable to Federal office contained in the Federal Constitution appear to be those in the fifteenth and nineteenth amendments. These are negative in character and go no further than to prevent the abridgment of the suffrage to "citizens of the United States" on account of sex, race, color, or previous condition of servitude. They do not even seem to prevent the admission of either aliens or infants or any other foreign or immature group to the voting rolls.

The amendment now required is not one permitting a controllable Congress to set itself up as the last word in the interpretation of the Constitution, but one which will terminate the improper influences at work both in determining who shall sit in Congress and how members shall vote when there.

Let us first have amendments which will eliminate the patronage voter, protect the citizens of a State from outside interference in the selection of their representatives in Congress, and which will free members of Congress from the pressures which destroy their independence.

The Open Forum Again.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As one who has devoted considerable time and labor to the Washington Open Forum, mentioned in The Post of September 30 in so friendly and favorable a manner, and having served as its president several terms, I naturally appreciate the letter of Mr. A. W. Burke. It is evident that Mr. Burke, along with a constantly increasing number of citizens throughout the United States, realizes the civic value of open forums and the need of organizations in which proponents of all philosophies, economic, political, religious and otherwise, may explain their views.

Replying to the implied inquiry in Mr. Burke's letter as to the plans of the Washington Open Forum this winter, I am glad to say that it is expected that an exceptionally well-balanced program of lectures and debates will be provided. The schedule of speakers and dates will be announced shortly. In the past the Forum has been addressed by a wide range of Representatives, clergymen, labor leaders, educators, scientists and nearly every profession and trade.

Represented on the long list, covering several years, have been Democrats, Republicans, Socialists, Communists, Farmer-Laborites, wets, drys, Jews, Catholics, Protestants, agnostics and atheists. The W. O. F. has earnestly tried to be, as your correspondent has described it, "a tolerant, progressive, truth-seeking organization." I believe it has succeeded as well as means and circumstances would permit.

Fortunately, there is nowadays a general attitude of approval of open forums, but in the early history of the Washington Open Forum, as well as of other forums, both before and since, there was for a long time a mountain of prejudice, discrimination and interference to encounter. Forums are today accepted as necessary parts of a healthy civic life and an asset to a community. But the time is not long since they were the targets of the most vicious assaults.

LINN A. E. GALE.

New Tories?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Kindly advise me if, when a member of the New Deal family resigns to become a banker or to enter a prominent law firm, does he thereby overnight become an economic royalist or a tory? JOHN ELI.
Washington, Sept. 30.

Dictators And Democracy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the face of almost universal (American) denunciation of the spirit of Mussolini and Hitler, is it not the part of fair play to note why men such as these, including Stalin of Russia and Kemal Pasha of Turkey, arose in emergencies?

Kemal Pasha has remade Turkey, and probably has done more for that much-abused country since the World War than had been done for it in any 500 years before. Mussolini has lifted Italy, not only to a place among the nations never before in modern times seen and felt, but has so inspirited its people with self-respect and cleanliness that the tourist today from America finds no land on the continent of Europe more livable than once shabby and insanitary Italy.

Hitler's task was even harder when he faced a desperate people, humiliated, moneyless and leaderless. The nation was on the verge of plunging into almost anything which promised relief or forgetfulness. Hitler appeared and the people, grasping at a straw, in their desperation, saw in him force and leadership. No fair-minded man can say he has not done wonders, despite blunders.

Russia is now becoming more and more moderate in her interpretation of democracy and bids fair to return to the fold as a republic, suited to Russian conditions. In the present conflict between democracy and forms of autocracy, Russia is easily aligned with democracy.

Our own people cannot forget how fanaticism was so blended with genuine worth and strength in the New England Puritan that, despite his excesses and the isms he inspired in his children, New England stands today as a monument to Puritan energy and intelligence. We should also remember that dictatorship is the half-way house between an absolute monarchy and democracy. France went that way, and other nations today are traveling in the same circle. Meantime, fanatics must not be confused with martyrs.

This is no plea for any form of dictatorship on earth, except that a dictatorship may, for the time, be the desperate means to carry a despairing people over an epoch of chaotic helplessness. Yet no one can reckon on what any dictator will do to save his own face and to keep his people in line until better days come. J. O. KNOTT.
Washington, Sept. 30.

Fighting "Polio."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When we read in the newspapers that Frederick Snite, of Chicago, was brought from China after becoming a victim of infantile paralysis, we patted ourselves on the back and said, "It just shows you what a modern nation can do."

He was only one of the thousands who were attacked by this dreaded unfilterable virus. What happened to the others? They have had no such treatment. Many have died, many will be crippled for life, and only a few will be completely cured.

This lack of treatment is one of the greatest crimes against American childhood. There are many doubts as to whether the disease can be prevented, but we certainly know that treatment after the disease has set in will help a great deal. Many more artificial respirators would save many a person. It seems to me that to spend millions of dollars for armaments to insure peace is very ridiculous if we don't use some of that money to buy "iron lungs" to combat an enemy just as great.

We need more places like the Warm Springs Foundation and the New York Reconstruction Home. As John B. Kelly, superintendent of the New York State Reconstruction Home, told me: "We have done great work there. Some of those that have been dismissed are men and women ready to start life over. They have been re-created.

MORRIS PEARLMUTTER.
Washington, Sept. 25.

America's Obligation In China.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Gen. Chiang Kai-shek was right when he stated that America has obligations in China which it is bound to respect. What is more, whether we like it or not, we have certain obligations toward our own self-respect—obligations which we assumed when, after giving the League of Nations a knockout blow, we offered as substitutes to a frightened world the treaty to protect China and, later, the Kellogg pact to outlaw war. Too many Americans now would, like the Kaiser, regard treaties as "scraps of paper," yet if treaties are worth signing they are assuredly worth respecting, else why lull the world into false security with mere nonsense?

The pacifist societies, which would invoke the neutrality law and let the humanities go hang, offer an excellent example of the blind attempting to lead the blind. We who are mothers of sons, who hate war with an undying hatred, cannot but feel that horror which permeates the Far East today—the horror of undisciplined greed, of civilian bombings, of unrestrained barbarism. We who have been lifelong pacifists are beginning to believe that there may be things even worse than war—the triumph of wrong because of stupidity and cowardice, for instance.

We can well thank God that every day brings fresh opportunities. The fact that, morally blind and callously selfish, we gave the League of Nations the first push toward its present impotency need not prevent us now from concerted efforts toward a saner world. The task of breathing life into the treaties we helped form need not forever remain a hopeless one. Because we are not unmindful of decency, because the principle of noblesse oblige is one on which the world revolves, because we refuse to believe in jungle law, because, indeed, we have our own survival to consider, ways must and can be found to vindicate the principles to which civilization subscribes. Good is not impotent; evil is victor only in a coward's world.

Persimmon Personality

DEMOSTHENES McGINNIS had just concluded a short, snappy, personal narrative with the remark, "That's the kind of persimmon I am!"

The declaration was not wholly characteristic of Mr. McGinnis, who neither brags nor indulges in self-analysis; so the Old Timers, sitting around Casual Smith's fire, were quiet for a moment or two.

It wasn't a big, roaring winter fire they sat around. It was a small October fire. You know the kind. In the country in the late spring the open fireplace becomes a closed fireplace, the summer swallows, which use it as their home, sweep the chimney with their wings, and see to it that the soot deposited on the hearth behind the fireboard becomes extra-good fertilizer, and in the fall, when the housewife hears Squaw Winter whistling in the wind, the soot is carried into the garden, the hearth is cleaned, presently a small fire sputters cheerfully and at last the living room has exactly the right temperature.

Well, that's the kind of fire it was. The parson adjusted one of the small logs before he said, "I've heard of a hairpin in that connection, but never persimmon."

"He's not a persimmon," said Capt. Ebenezer Longbow. "He flatters himself. A persimmon at this time of the year is bursting with pride and importance, while McGinnis is old and wizened and suffers from ingrowing modesty."

"Somebody will be accusing you of modesty next," said D. McGinnis, "and that will be even sillier.

Capt. Longbow ignored the interruption. He went on: "My cousin, Abinidab Snooks—it used to be Sevenoaks before the family got pressed for time—once wrote a poem about the ripe persimmon. Two of the lines went:

> While all their vested interests have proportions aldermanic
> Persimmons know astringency that borders on a panic.

I can't tell you what it means exactly but that, probably, is what makes it poetry. But, anyhow, it doesn't seem to apply to McGinnis. He isn't busting his vest."

* * * *

"All I know about persimmons," said Casual Smith, "is what I fail to see in the newspaper." He picked up a paper as he spoke. "Here in the provisions and produce column you'll find peaches, plums, apples and pears (but no persimmons), with these mystic words attached." He read from the paper, spelling out the abbreviations, mentioning and stressing the periods. "Truck rec. mod. Sup. dem. slow, mkt. dull, Md. and Pa. bu. bas." Nothing like that about persimmons. Indeed, I am inclined to think that the little pig who goes to market never sees them there, and there is hardly anything else in the world that isn't discoverable in some market (even a dem. slow mkt.) by some little pig."

"Well, little pig that stayed home," said McGinnis, "you don't have to worry. There are plenty on the ground under the trees."

"I'm that kind of little pig," confessed Casual Smith. "And my dog is another. It may even be that they sweeten us in some way. We have it on high authority that they improve the quality of the wild game that feed on them.

"Yet in spite of its good qualities the tree and its fruit are largely ignored. Its wood is a species of ebony, hard and durable, but it is not esteemed especially in commerce and the farmer holds it negligible as fuel.

"Wait a minute," interrupted Capt. Longbow. "The home brewers have not wholly neglected it. If you knead the persimmons with bran, make a cake and bake it, and then let the cake ferment with the aid of yeast, you can get a kind of beer that is rather liked by those who rather like that kind of beer."

"Small beer," said Casual Smith. "It doesn't do justice to the persimmon. Now, it may be that a taste for persimmons is an acquired one, and not enough people like them to justify transportation charges. But the real trouble is the difficulty in marketing. They do not ripen slowly in the sun as do most other fruits. They ripen suddenly with the first touch of frost. As a matter of fact, they are not really ripe until they have bletted, are ready to rot. When they are fairly good to look at they are not good to eat. When they are good to eat they are not always good to look at. They are gentlemen who do not carry their liquor well. They don't carry well at all. My wife once took some ripe ones to her uncle in Philadelphia. She carried them in a quart jar and the old gentlemen spooned them out. He happened to be fond of them and knew all about them. But I hardly think that Persimmon Transit Jam will ever be popular.

"The medlar and the persimmon are in the same case in the matter of ripening and for that reason we are apt to put them in a class by themselves, but their difference from other fruit is only one of degree. The life of any fruit is a through trip with no stop at way stations. Like every life, it is first a climb and then a descent. Maturity, not ripeness, is at the top of the hill. Ripeness is just over the top, on the grade. The medlar and the persimmon make the mistake of accentuating the fact.

"And there you are. I don't know what kind of persimmon McGinnis considers himself. But if he's a persimmon at all I'm——"

"You're a medlar!" said McGinnis, with conviction.

Plight of the Pinks.

WELL, ANYWAY, the Hugo Black thing isn't all scandal and outrage, and for the comedy relief in an otherwise angry episode we owe thanks to our red and pink pals over on the left who have been giving a hilarious imitation of the wrestler who let out a horrible yowl of pain, rolled over on his back and discovered that, in the confusion of the struggle, he had been twisting his own foot.

Would anybody ever have expected to see the day when the butchers' paper literati would find themselves stuck with a Kluxer, and did anyone ever imagine that in a desperate attempt to save face our Bolos would be driven to the humiliating necessity of apologizing for their guy's lack of intelligence and character and minimizing the atrocity of the Klan?

TO OBTAIN the best effect it is necessary to go back to the days when the Klan was riding high and read up on the resounding fury of the Reds and Pinks. In those days there was no discount or mitigation, and anyone who joined out with the night-riders, whether for active personal service as a terrorist or merely as a politician seeking votes, was flattered by the name of heel.

In fact, the politician who wasn't really Klannish at heart but joined merely to win a cheap political job was considered to be distinctly lower than the ignoramuses who actually thought the Pope was fixing to storm the White House and earnestly subscribed to the Mother Goose prattle about Kludds, Kladds and Kligrapps.

The politician, if he had character, would have felt himself contaminated by the approval of such people and honored by their hatred, and you may read writings to this effect in all the publications which are now attempting to argue that when Hugo changed from a white nightshirt to a black one he also became another person. At that time they wouldn't grant you that any adult man who joined the Klan could live long enough to get over it, and there are those of us who heard them the first time and agreed entirely.

Then, all of a sudden, and thanks to the deception practiced on the Senate as well as on themselves, they discovered that they had been cheering shrilly for a man with a past.

• • • •

I WILL SAY one thing for them. They do not often speak so dishonestly. Usually they are fairly consistent, and they have done themselves injustice in this case, for they would have been at least honest if they had admitted a mistake instead of resorting to arguments which sound like the state papers of Little Joe Goebbels.

The counterattack has been directed mainly at the personalities and motives of those who made and exploited the expose, with special emphasis on the personality of Paul Block, whose Pittsburgh paper broke the story. It isn't necessary for me to point out that Block isn't an issue. Neither is Hearst with his personal grudge against Hugo Black, and equally irrelevant is the fact that many persons who delight in the Klan story are hypocrites who wouldn't object to Klannishness if Hugo were a reactionary Republican.

The issue is whether Hugo is or ever was in his mature years a member of the Ku Klux Klan and whether those who condemned the Klan so fiercely in its hey-day now wish to change their position to anticipate the possibility that he was or is.

• • • •

NOTHING can be gained by denouncing people who are not involved, and even if it be granted for the sake of argument that Paul Block had ulterior motives for breaking the story the question remains the same.

I am afraid our pals on the left have lost their sense in their shock and horror at the discovery, but they will do themselves no good railing at fate, the house fly and crime, meanwhile neglecting the trouble. They ought to calm down, accept the situation, see the doctor and start taking their medicine.

Airplanes, it seems, will drop the deadliest of germs back of the enemy lines, with the women and children, the old and the sick as very special targets. A few cylinders full of typhus germs dropped on the public schools, some shells loaded with cholera bugs neatly placed in the center of the village green, and a few containers of paratyphoid sprinkled over the defenseless community by the intrepid fellows who make modern war! Pretty, eh, what!

There are, it begins to appear, generals who could concentrate on a spread of typhus back of the fighting lines and order the brave airmen to dash forth and sow frightful diseases among the noncombatants.

Neutrality Dangers

President Of Foreign Policy Association Urges United States To Adopt Policy Of Positive Action In Far East.

By Dr. Raymond Leslie Buell.

(Editor's note: This is an excerpt from the address made by Dr. Buell before the American Academy of Political and Social Science in Philadelphia yesterday.)

IT IS DEPRESSING to see well-intentioned Americans, in their desire to keep this country out of war, contend that the United States is justified in injuring China through its neutrality act. Should American liberalism take the attitude that the end justifies the means, or should it lose its sense of justice and its capacity for sacrifice, then the future of democracy in this country is indeed dark. Every American desires to keep out of war, but means must be found to achieve this end which do not violate fundamental American conceptions of justice to weaker peoples and which do not approve, even by implication, the acts of wanton terrorism which Japan is committing in China today.

There are two fundamental defects in our neutrality act, as applied to the Orient. The first is that the application of this act—far from keeping the United States out of war—would ultimately endanger our security.

Lacking raw materials, the three great dictatorships today cannot successfully fight a great power. But if they succeed in annexing neighboring territory containing such materials, the task confronting the United States of defending the Western Hemisphere will become infinitely more onerous than if we today adopted a positive policy of co-operation to avert war.

Isolation Called A Pure Delusion.

SO-CALLED "realists" contend that Japan will bog down in its present offensive, or that it will become satisfied by new annexations in China. This argument has, however, proved fallacious in the last few years. Instead of becoming satisfied, both Japan and Italy have developed new ambitions as a result of their conquests of Manchukuo and Ethiopia.

Should China offer prolonged resistance to Japan, the result will be equally dangerous. For in that case, it will be extremely difficult to prevent the intervention of Russia; and such intervention may cause the war to spread to Europe and the rest of the world.

The belief, underlying the Neutrality Act, that there is safety in continental isolation is a pure delusion. As a result of electrically driven ships, radio, telephone and airplanes the world is literally shriveling up.

Meanwhile, the military forces of destruction are increasing in magnitude and destructiveness. America could view with comparative unconcern the European arms race before the World War; but no power in the modern world can feel secure when irresponsible and lustful military machines have at their command thousands of engines of death. If the American policy of retreating before international lawlessness continues, it may be only a matter of time before some power, in imitation of the Barbary pirates of old, will again levy tolls on American vessels and citizens in foreign waters and on the high seas.

One of America's greatest pacifists, Thomas Jefferson, then Secretary of State, proposed that the United States and the maritime powers of Europe should form a league to blockade the Barbary states. This philosophy has recently been applied by Britain and France in the Mediterranean by organizing an international naval patrol, as a result of which the piracy in this area has been terminated. In contrast, the theory of the neutrality act is to keep American ships out of the Mediterranean. This policy applied in the Orient is already undermining the principles of the Nine-Power Treaty.

No government which enunciates moral principles and then runs away when they are shamefully violated, can long command the respect of other nations or even of its own citizens.

Lytton Commission's Views Are Commended.

THE SECOND vice of the neutrality act is that its application in the Orient would be fundamentally unjust. That act would forbid China to import munitions which it sorely needs, but would allow Japan to continue to buy raw materials, upon a cash-and-carry basis, which are essential to its military activities.

If neutrality means anything, it means being fair to both parties; but the neutrality act of 1937 virtually makes the United States an ally of Japan.

To defend Japanese imperialism on the ground that Japan is suffering from serious economic maladjustments is illogical and unjust. The only fundamental solution of Japanese economic difficulties lies in voluntary and friendly co-operation between China and Japan along the lines suggested by the Lytton Commission; but Japan has rejected this course in favor of a military solution which will merely increase its economic and social difficulties. For the United States or any other power to make economic concessions to aggressive dictatorships, without obtaining in return the reduction of armaments and the abandonment of imperialistic ambitions, will be interpreted as another sign of weakness and be an encouragement to further aggression.

These fundamental defects in a policy of retreat explain why President Roosevelt has failed to apply the neutrality act in the Far East, and why the State Department seems to have abandoned its initial policy of withdrawal in favor of the older and stronger policy of protecting our interests. This new policy is indicated by the decision to keep our naval forces in China, the return of Ambassador Johnson to Nanking, and the strong protest against the bombardment of Nanking.

This policy, however, involves the daily danger of a clash with Japan but in its present limited form has no effect in shortening the duration of the war. In failing to think in co-operative terms, the present policy of the State Department in the Far East involves all the risks of international sanctions without any of its advantages.

Neutrality Act's Amendment Urged.

IF THE APPLICATION of the neutrality act as well as the present Roosevelt policy involve grave dangers, what course should we follow in the Orient today? Certainly we should not go to war with Japan. But how is it possible to justify a policy of shutting off munitions to China and yet of selling war materials, such as scrap iron, cotton and oil, which are essential to the Japanese military machine? Congress should amend the Neutrality Act in either one of two directions. It should give discretion to the President either to allow the export of munitions to China and other belligerents upon a cash-and-carry basis, or embargo raw material exports to Japan and other powers. Only by adopting one of these two changes can the Neutrality Act satisfy fundamental considerations of justice.

Meanwhile the Neutrality Act already gives the President power to prohibit American vessels from carrying any designated materials to any belligerent. Today Japanese ships carry only one-third of the trade between Japan and the United States. Since many Japanese merchant vessels have been diverted to transport purposes, the imposition of a shipping embargo by the United States would severely injure Japan and thus offset the damage done by an American arms embargo to China.

As far as shortening the duration of the war, however, such as American embargo would be ineffective if Japan could obtain ships from other countries. Consequently the United States would be justified in imposing a shipping embargo only if it is internationally applied. It is to be hoped therefore that the League advisory committee in the Far East, now meeting in Geneva, will recommend that the League powers apply an arms and shipping embargo against Japan, leaving China free to import from European markets, in accordance with League principles.

At the same time, the President of the United States should prohibit American vessels from carrying war materials. If an international shipping embargo were thus imposed, Japan could not possibly import the raw materials needed to carry on its campaign of conquest. Such form of co-operative action would not involve sending a single airplane or war ship to the Orient; it would restore validity to the Nine-Power treaty and the Anti-War pact; it would bring the Sino-Japanese war to an end within six months, while the United States would not be singly exposed to the anger of Japan because it would be acting jointly with other powers.

The one realistic no-war policy is one which denies the aggressor—rather than the victim—the materials necessary for its armies, but which does not involve the United States in single-handed adventure.

Cross Purposes

By Barnet Nover

Italy-Germany-Japan.

SINCE THE SUMMER and fall of 1936 there have been many who have taken very seriously the recurrent rumors that a triple alliance between Germany, Italy and Japan had been or was about to be consummated.

The belief was not wholly a phantasm of the imagination. It rested on certain realities. It was supported by a series of developments which indicated growing friendliness between the three great "have-not" powers. And, above all, it was possible to discern distinct advantages which each of these three powers could derive from close co-operation with the other two.

Yet the fact remains that there is no German-Italian-Japanese alliance and, at the moment, no such alliance is likely to come into being. Whatever possibilities there may have been a year ago for such development ended abruptly when Japan issued marching orders to her troops in China.

• • • •

THERE HAS BEEN much ink spilled about that "war of ideologies" which is dividing the world into contending camps. Germany and Italy are Fascist states and Japan's political and economic structure is rapidly being transformed along totalitarian lines.

All three powers are or profess to be fearful of communism and view Soviet Russia with hostility. Furthermore, all three frown upon the ideals of the League of Nations and regard the collective system of peace as a potential barrier to their particular ambitions.

All this makes for a certain sympathy between them. But does it necessarily make for anything more than that? In particular do these points of similarity, these manifestations of harmony, necessarily provide the motive power for an alliance between them?

The answer is in the negative. There is no alliance between Germany and Italy. There is none, in any real sense, between Germany and Japan. There is certainly none between Germany, Italy and Japan together.

• • • •

THE FACT is important. For it makes very clear what is at present so easily forgotten that common ideologies do not make for common policies. Nations, whether Fascist or democratic, persist in pursuing purely nationalist ends. They are not prepared to join forces with any nation or nations, even when the political systems are similar to their own if nothing material is to be gained thereby.

At the time of the German-Japanese anti-Comintern agreement of November 25, 1936, it was pointed out that between those two nations an alliance was, under certain circumstances, not only possible, but probable.

In "Mein Kampf" Hitler made it clear that he favored German expansion, but that this expansion should follow the lines of the Brest-Litovsk treaty of 1918 rather than the lines laid down by Bismarck in the 80's of the last century. Since then, to be sure, Hitler has apparently been won over to the idea that Germany needs overseas colonies. But he has never abandoned the hope that Germany's real colonial expansion would be in the direction of the Ukraine.

• • • •

ON THE OTHER hand strategic as well as economic considerations have long impelled the Japanese militarists to view eastern Siberia as a proper goal of Japanese imperialist ambitions. And since it would be easiest for both the German and Japanese ambitions to be satisfied, if Germany and Japan combined against Russia in a war of two fronts, an ultimate alliance between the Berlin and Tokyo governments was generally assumed.

Yet had there been any such alliance last summer one of two things would, perforce, have happened. In the first place Germany and Japan would have attacked Russia simultaneously. Or, in the second place, these two nations would have held their fire until such simultaneous action became possible. By the same token neither of the two powers would have got itself involved in a major war with any nation other than Russia.

• • • •

BUT WHAT ACTUALLY happened? By July of this year Germany had begun to reduce its commitments in Spain, or at least not increase them in any marked degree. Japan, however, began a new forward thrust in China.

Possibly the Japanese high command never envisaged the kind of resistance the Japanese forces would meet. But the fact is now clear that win, lose or draw Japan will emerge from the present Chinese conflict in very bad shape. A simultaneous German-Japanese war on Russia is no longer a practical possibility. On the other hand, the Japanese attempt to achieve hegemony in eastern Asia clearly conflicts with the German trade program.

As the power third on the list in the China trade, Germany has much to lose, little to gain by a Japanese victory. Nor does the release of Japanese pressure on the Soviet border, which the war in China has produced, fit in particularly with Germany's program.

Trade factors also impel Italy to view Japanese imperialism in China with suspicion. It was not so many years ago that Mussolini, borrowing a role made famous by the former Kaiser, was warning the world of the "yellow peril." Italy can gain nothing by a Japanese victory. And Italy, too, cannot help but be irritated with Japan for having embarked on a course which has given Russia an opportunity to play a more vigorous role in European affairs. And Italy, for her part, has her hands full in Spain.

The nightmare of a triple alliance of Fascist powers sprawling across two continents from the North Sea and the Adriatic to the Japan Sea and the islands of the Pacific need no longer trouble anyone's sleep. There was always an element of the unreal about that German-Italian-Japanese combination. But it took the developments in China to dispose of it entirely.

Duke of Normandy

By William Lyon Phelps

Conquest Of England.

William the Conqueror was born more than 900 years ago in a castle in the little town of Falaise, Normandy, in France. He was about 39 years old when he successfully invaded England, September 28, 1066.

The castle where he was born still stands on top of a rock 120 feet high. Here the boy grew up, trained from the very beginning in the art of war, his main recreation being hunting. His childhood and early boyhood were passed in this castle and its neighborhood; his nurses were rough soldiers.

• • • •

One of the most thrilling historical places I have ever seen is the little medieval church at Dives, in Normandy; it was at the famous tavern in Dives, about which Hopkinson Smith wrote his book, "The Armchair at the Inn," that William passed his last night in Normandy in September, 1066, before sailing for England. Well, when you enter the church, turn right about as soon as you are within and look at the names scratched over the door; those are the names of the Norman knights who accompanied William on this most famous channel crossing in history.

• • • •

The best thing that ever happened to England and to the whole English-speaking race was the conquest by William. And it is astounding that, although England is separated from the continent by only 20 miles, not a single person since William has succeeded in entering England without an invitation and staying there.

He was Duke of Normandy, a broad and fair region. What vision of the future greatness of that damp and foggy island made him so eager to possess it?

Interviews Officer J. W. Kite, for 34 Years a D. C. Policeman.

ON THE BOOKS of the Harbor Precinct he's listed as Officer J. W. Kite, assigned to the waterfront, between Eleventh and Fourteenth streets. However, to everybody in the section, he's Mr. Kite . . . and there's something more than respect in the "Mister."

He's only been on the waterfront beat for four years, but he's now as integral a part of it as he was of the beat on the "Hill," which he patrolled for 20 years.

I'd heard that the waterfront beat was a tough one, and that's why I searched out Officer Kite. But I didn't get a story about roaring nights and clashes between heavy-handed oyster shuckers and fishermen. I got another sort of a story and learned the reason why "Mr." Kite is the most beloved figure on the waterfront.

He's a broad-shouldered man of medium height, who wears lightly the burden of 64 years, 34 of them spent on the force. There's something reassuring in his sturdy form as it moves down the line of darkened oyster houses, and there's a quality to him which is more than reassuring when you get to know him.

As you walk along with him down by the waterfront, where the small waves break the reflected moon into little pieces, you come to realize why everyone addresses him with a "Mister," laden with something more than respect.

• • • •

"YOU HEARD this was a 'tough' beat? Why, Lord A'mighty, son, this is a fine beat," Officer Kite said. "It's filled with fine people.

"Why, Lord A'mighty," he said. "I know everybody on this beat, and they're good people. They're friends of mine. I like them."

Right about then I began to realize why everyone I had met, when looking for the officer, had lighted up with a smile, volunteered directions eagerly and added that he was a "fine man."

It isn't merely that Officer Kite is a "friendly" policeman. More than that has endeared him to a "beat" not all would welcome. Thirty-four years of "pounding the bricks" have given him a tolerant understanding of men and events which enables him to say with an undisguised fervor: "Why, these are good people. I know them!"

Officer Kite's respect for his "people" isn't unreciprocated. When you stroll along with him, in the hours bordering on midnight, you hear the constant refrain of "Evening, Mr. Kite," or "Nice night, Mr. Kite." You begin to understand what the man at the oyster bar meant when he said, "Why, everybody down here would fight at the drop of the hat for 'Mr.' Kite."

I sought for the reason behind that respect and love which follows this broad-shouldered old policeman on his nightly round. And I think I discovered it. Though he has no "buddy" on his solitary vigil, he doesn't go alone. He carries with him the sum of all the joys and the sum of all the sorrows of his neighborhood.

It isn't enough for him that his "people" are out of trouble. He wants the assurance that they're getting along "all right." He wants to know how the children are, and whether Billy has made that high school football team.

• • • •

AS WE MOVED past the fish houses a tall young man with a broken nose started to go by in the shadows. Mr. Kite drew him aside and I couldn't hear all that they were saying, but I thought that he asked him about his job.

"Yes, Mr. Kite," I heard the young man answer, and his voice came out low and respectfully. He didn't have the look of a young fellow who would prefix many remarks with a "Mister," but it was always "Mr." when speaking to Officer Kite.

Everybody along the waterfront knows where "Mr." Kite stands. They know he wants to help them out. They know he's square. That's why they'd fight for him, and that's why they liked him when, for 20 years, he covered a beat in the Fifth Precinct. Sometimes, I expect, Officer Kite rather misses that old beat in No. 5, because there were more children there. He raised two generations of them up in that section.

Remembering it, he'll chuckle a bit and say, "Gosh, I guess I was the regular judge and jury up there—with those kids."

Anything from settling a fight to deciding a close one in a ball game was in Officer Kite's line and, when he felt it was needed, he would administer the spanking which the parents neglected.

One of the boys behind the counter in an all-night lunch along the waterfront fills in some of the background of Officer Kite's career in No. 5.

"He didn't try to make any records for arrests," he said. "I remember one time some kid had been caught for stealing. 'I'll take care of him,' Mr. Kite said, and then, when the crowd had broken up, he turned to the kid, who was crying, and said, 'Now, Johnny, let's go home and talk this over with your mother.'"

• • • •

MR. KITE remembers some of those things, these nights when he strolls his beat down by the wharves. He likes to look back on them and maybe, once in a while, he'll talk them over.

"Thirty-four years in uniform is a long time," he said reflectively. "I never looked for promotions and I never wanted them. I was satisfied. I didn't want to be taken away from a beat where I could help people.

"Lord A'mighty, don't you think I could get some fun out of remembering how the neighborhood 'bad boy' I used to spank turned into a fine, upstanding man. I like to think that maybe I had something to do with the way those kids on my beat in the Fifth turned out. Now they're doctors and lawyers and big men, and I like to think that bringing them home to their folks like I did was a lot better than taking them down to court.

"I suppose I could have gone down to court as often as the next," said Officer Kite, "but sometimes I don't think that's the best way. I can't see why I should wake up some poor devil sleeping in a doorway, just to make sure that he's drunk, so I can run him.

"I figger it might be a better idea to find him a place to sleep; or, leastways, to wrap his coat around him so he won't catch cold."

Personally, I figure that Officer Kite has the right idea, and I guess that's the way the folks feel about it down by the waterfront and over on his old beat in the Fifth.

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

Call for Author

Not so long ago a girl, confined to a wheel chair, wrote the Forest Service that she enjoyed the Farm and Home Hour broadcast because one story concerned winter sports and reminded her of the days when she used to go ice skating. Others write in, complimenting the performers' work, anticipating the next moves of Ranger Jim Robbins, inquiring variously about the characters and sometimes asking where the author gets his ideas.

Robbins.

So we set out and ran the author to earth, brought him to the footlights, as it were, and without ado introduce him—Marvin Beers, ladies and gentlemen. He has to create a situation for Uncle Sam's forest rangers every week, and it's a tough assignment—but get the details first hand, as he scribbled them off for this column yesterday:

• • • •

"Getting material for the radio show, 'Uncle Sam's Forest Rangers,' is an interesting and a tough assignment. It's interesting because the rangers are doing an interesting and vital job; it's tough because ideas don't always pop up when they are needed most. The program was originated some five years ago by Charles E. Randall, editor of the Division of Information for the Forest Service. And should you ask me whence the story ideas come . . .

"There's no place too near or too far away to suggest the beginning of a story. They're based on the everyday work of the rangers, largely suggested by their actual experiences. They're full of stories and will tell them, if you catch a ranger in his leisure moments . . .

"But the stories one finds are only a beginning. Around the idea must be woven the fabric of a complete tale" . . . (But get going, Mr. Beers, give us some of your personal problems; there must be some in hatching an exciting plot every week of the year.)

"The problem of a deadline isn't a terrible threat. But occasionally a moment of suspense sneaks up. When the Ohio Valley flood was raging at its peak, a story was needed to portray the emergency work of the Forest Service. After a day or so of searching, no idea could be found. Reams and reams of reports were read and reread. These gave the numbers of refugees, statistics, but none of the human interest, the seething drama of the job.

"For the thousandth time a newspaper was picked up. There, in the middle of the page, was a picture of a church, with the waters of the flood swirling up about the steeple. There was an idea! This was seen in the night time; the next morning an unshaven, sleepy-eyed Government worker, who is Beers, tossed the scratched-up manuscript on his boss' desk."

Thumbnail biography: He was born in Boston, Mass., 27 years ago; attended Nebraska Wesleyan University in Lincoln; came to Washington to be a lawyer, but thought better of it and went into the theater. "I spent much of my time doing Little Theater shows and radio acting," he says. He was with the original company of the Roadside Theater, and now spends his time—on the side from the Government—at work with the Washington Civic Theater as one of its board of governors. Also, he directs shows at G. W. University.

Those who think they know it all about any one thing, should read this: Joseph P. Harris, research director of the Committee for Public Administration—affiliated with the Public Administration Clearing House, of which Louis P. Brownlow is chairman—asks whether members of those organizations might attend the administrative management courses offered by the Agriculture Graduate School. There is someone who knows that all knowledge never has been run to ground.

From the Public Works Recreational Association—not heard from in some time: They are planning the first of a series of dances to be held this winter, the first arranged for October 22 in the Shoreham Hotell ballroom. The hours will be 10 to 1. Also, the association will woo the arts in form of the drama. Plans for this are somewhat nebulous. More than 40 members have joined in this enterprise. It started out to be a purely dramatic organization, one that would handle the heavier stuff. But so many tap-dancers and cork tips opened fire that a variety show is projected as the first offering, a minstrel show next and then a melodrama.

The Farm Credit Chorus projects something interesting, universally interesting, to music lovers: It is proposed that a program of Stephen Foster's music be given at the first choral concert in the fall. And meanwhile, the organization has elected officers, as follows:

R. Hamilton Cawood, business manager; Edna Rosenheim, treasurer, and Lester Fossick, secretary and librarian. New members are welcomed in the organization.

Saturday's Sidelights: The ARA will dance against the midnight, honoring the men and girls softball teams which have been champions for the last three and two years, respectively . . . This will be a victory dance, given in the beautiful patio of Agriculture's Administration Building . . . The big appleing will go on until midnight . . .

The National Association of Retired Federal Employes goes into session at 2 p. m. in room 43 of the Natural History Building . . . # City's Night Life Pauses as Nation Listens In on Words of Justice Black

Post Staff Photos.

The crowds gathered in front of the house of Claude Hamilton at 3122 Tennyson street, and history was made as Mr. Justice Black spoke to the Nation from inside, while throughout America citizens pondered his words.

Down in Washington's Harlem there was unabated interest in what the new justice said about the Klan. Witness this barber shop, at Fourteenth and T streets northwest.

Black Creates History at Ease Among Friends

Black entered a room from which the eyes of most of the world were barred, on which the ears of all the world were fixed—and the temporary broadcasting studio in the home of Hamilton.

The justice was in an oxford gray suit, a yellow pencil sticking through its lapel, and he wore a maroon and white tie.

Mrs. Black wore a black velvet evening gown, and the other women also were in evening dress.

Justice Black came in accompanied by his host. He seemed at ease. He smiled. Then he seemed a trifle ruffled. He walked across the room and tossed a letter into the fire, then, turning to Hamilton, he said, as the flames flared up:

"Well, that makes it a little more cheery. Wish I could read a little more of my mail and get rid of it."

Justice Joins Party.

The justice and Hamilton walked out of the living room into the dining room, where the party was in progress, and at this juncture the radio men renewed their feverish activity of talking "voice levels" and timing introductory remarks.

Fully eight minutes before the broadcast was to start, Justice Black re-entered the broadcast room and as he started to take his seat at the little table he was asked by Hamilton if he planned to make a statement for the press. Justice Black quickly replied:

"No! I'll make my speech and it's finished."

Then, a moment later, Hamilton leaned over the justice's shoulder and inquired:

"What the dickens do they want to know that for?" Justice Black laughed.

Hamilton smiled—they were developing a little joke between them—then said:

"The newsreel men even want to put me in the picture—said it was my big chance."

The radio men were testing the Black voice, probing the levels of that Alabama drawl, seeking to know what to anticipate in the way of acoustics out of the tensity of a great historical moment.

Four great broadcasting systems had placed their microphones before the justice, but for some reason better known to himself—or for no reason at all—Black favored with the position of his head one microphone marked with the initials of the Columbia Broadcasting System. Engineers of rival radio companies were quick to appreciate the advantage this might give Columbia, and thereafter Justice Black faced all microphones impartially.

Justice Black appeared calm, save for the nervous brushing of the wisp of hair that continually fell across his forehead. He drank many times from a glass of water at his elbow. Then all radio men signaled "Okay" for the voice tests and Justice Black fell expectantly silent.

All Becomes Still.

The room, too, fell deadly still, save for the engineers timing the announcers, like the beating of a clock: "Two minutes . . . one minute . . . thirty seconds . . . ten seconds."

Justice Black went on the air, and in the dead silence of the room, the voice that was carried to the Nation with such clarity was like a whisper, sometimes inaudible, submerged at one time by the coughing of a radio man who, under the baleful glare of every eye in the room, painfully made his way to a porch.

During all the terrible concentration on one all-transcending event, a 5-year-old girl slipped out of her bed in the upstairs of the Hamilton home. She was Jule Hamilton, who got up "way past bed time" to listen to "Uncle Hugo" just as mama from last night she might be found edging downstairs for her first glimpse of the Christmas tree.

She sat on the stairs, her hands cupping her chin, and listened as intently as any adult below, although hours before she had been told to "stay in bed." Once during the broadcast she called:

"Daddy!"

One Sleeps Through Talk.

Probably the only human being in the Hamilton household, if not the entire neighborhood, whose tenor of life was not one whit altered by the occasion was 17-months-old Claude Hamilton 3d. He slept in his crib.

Text of Black's Address

iness life with the poison of religious bigotry. It will bring the political religionist back into undeserved and perilous influence in affairs of government. It will elevate the elast worthy to political positions because religion or race bars others from a password. It will resurrect practices and arguments from which this country suffered sorely in the 1920s. It will revive the spirit which, in 1928, caused a national campaign to be waged largely upon issues unworthy of a free people. It will bankrupt many businessmen whose sole offense is that they have religious beliefs which do not accord with the prevailing religion in their communities. It will punish the professional man whose patients and clients boycott him, not because of lack of professional ability, but because there are in his locality few members of his faith or his race. It will again set neighbor against neighbor and turn old friends into new enemies.

To contribute my part in averting such a catastrophe in this land dedicated to tolerance and freedom, I break with precedents of the past to talk with you tonight.

An effort is being made to convince the people of America that I am intolerant, and that I am prejudiced against people of the Jewish and Catholic faiths, and against members of the Negro race. These insinuations are advanced despite the fact that, for the last 11 years, I have served in the Senate of the United States under constant and microscopic public scrutiny.

My words and acts are a matter of public record. I believe that my record as a Senator refutes every implication of racial or religious intolerance. It shows that I was of that group of liberal Senators who have consistently fought for the civil, economic and religious rights of all Americans, without regard to rade or creed.

The insinuations of racial and religious intolerance made concerning me are based on the fact that I joined the Ku Klux Klan about 15 years ago. I did join the Klan. I later resigned. I never rejoined. What appeared then, or what appears now, on the records of the organization, I do not know.

I never have considered and I do not now consider the unsolicited card given to me shortly after my nomination to the Senate as a membership of any kind in the Ku Klux Klan. I never used it. I did not even keep it.

Before becoming a Senator I dropped the Klan. I have had nothing whatever to do with it since that time. I abandoned it. I completely discontinued any association with the organization. I have never resumed it and never expect to do so.

At no meeting of any organization, social, political or fraternal, have I ever indicated the slightest departure from my steadfast faith in the unfettered right of every American to follow his conscience in matters of religion. I have no sympathy with any organization or group which, anywhere or at any time, arrogates to itself the un-American power to interfere in the slightest degree with complete religious freedom. No words have ever been or will ever be spoken by me, directly or indirectly, indicating that any native or foreign-born person in our free country should or could be restricted in his right to worship according to the dictates of his conscience. I have supported candidates for public office without reference to their faith. In my indorsement of applicants for governmental positions, I have acted without discrimination of any kind or character.

I number among my friends many members of the colored race. I have watched the progress of its members with sympathy and admiration. Certainly they are entitled to the full measure of protection accorded to the citizenship of our country by our Constitution and our laws.

Some of my best and most intimate friends are Catholics and Jews. Shortly after I moved to Birmingham, more than a quarter of a century ago, I formed one of the most-valued friendships of my life with a son of Jewish faith. He was one of my closest associates and strongest political supporters. Months of our lives were spent together, much of the time in his home. He stood so nearly in the place of a father to me that while in the Army in 1918 I designated this trusted Jewish friend as sole executor of my will. In my campaigns for public office his counsel and assistance were always mine. His widow, who was a guest in my home at the recent inauguration of President Roosevelt, was one of the first to congratulate me upon my nomination to be a justice of the Supreme Court.

When this statement is ended my discussion of the question is closed.

I believe the character and conduct of every public servant, great and small, should be subject to the constant scrutiny of the people. This must be true if a democracy serves its purpose.

It is in this spirit that I now bid those who have been listening to me goodnight.

'Evasive' or 'He Satisfied Me,' U. S. Comment on Black Talk

reel photographers sought to "take" the crowds; children, relieved of the necessity for retiring early because there was no school the following morning, were having a field day, all trying to get in the pictures being snapped.

"It's the biggest thing in this neighborhood since the man shot himself in his garage," was the comment of Daniel Goodacre, 13, of 6112 Thirty-first street northwest, around the corner from the Hamilton home. "It's bigger than the grass fire that burned over all that block down there."

Mrs. Black arrived in a car by herself, hastily left it—and then went to the wrong house, the home of Mrs. Margaret H. Cox, next door to the Hamiltons. Learning her mistake, she hurried up the terraced lawn to the Hamilton home.

Mrs. Cox, meanwhile, was busy all evening preparing coffee for chilled reporters and others. Before the broadcast, the Hamiltons' maid, Mae, appeared at her door.

"Have you some extra coffee, Mrs. Cox?" she asked. "The justice and his friends are powerful anxious for some and I've run out."

Mrs. Cox supplied the coffee and as Mae departed asked her to run up a shade on a side window of the Hamilton home so she could see the broadcast as well as hear it. But the shade never went up, those in the Hamilton home fearing that photographers would try to shoot pictures through it and disturb the address. All the shades in the house were kept down throughout the evening.

Every radio in Washington played to capacity audiences as the Justice spoke. Taxi-drivers had their radios turned on for the benefit of fares; if there were no fares, the drivers themselves were listening.

On downtown streets little groups were gathered around radio-equipped parked cars listening intently. In homes and apartments there were many radio parties to hear the talk. In drug stores and other business establishments open at that hour the scene was repeated.

Reaction to the speech in the city was varied. Praise and censure of political leaders followed party lines. But the other citizens and the man in the street had any number of viewpoints in interviews with The Post.

Klan Leader Comments.

Howard Bittings, Great Titan, Province No. 1 of the Realm of Virginia, Ku Klux Klan, said: "No fairer statement could be made in the world—he will be as fine a member of the court as it has ever had—he will be fair and just to all, regardless of race, color or creed."

At the same time, J. F. Brady, controller of the Fourth Degree, Washington General Assembly, Knights of Columbus, declared, "In my opinion, Mr. Black made a straightforward talk tonight and was sincere in his statements. He appeared to have an earnest desire to place the facts before the people."

On the other hand, the Rev. Father J. N. King, administrator of St. Ann's Parish, Tennellyton, asserted, "Although Justice Black admitted that he was a member of the Ku Klux Klan and that he had resigned, he did not offer any excuse for his joining the organization. He was somewhat contradictory in his statements, and, to me, it seemed that he sidetracked the entire issue."

"Does Not Meet Issue."

Disapproval of the justice's statement was expressed by Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, who declared that "I don't think it answers the question. It does not meet the issue."

"The question is not Does he belong to the Klan now?" he added, "but did Justice Black join it after he had reached the age of intellectual discretion? Everything seems to indicate that he was no longer in his 'salad days,' and yet he joined the Klan apparently with his own political interests in mind. I don't think a man who would use such a method to secure his personal advance should be honored by so high a position."

Rabbi Abram Simon declared, "My reaction was rather favorable. I have come to feel that this stirring up of hatreds and ill-will is not increasing good feeling in the country . . . I found that Justice Black spoke against those who were spreading ill-will and prejudice.

"He admitted that he had been a member of the Klan. I can't see how he could take the oath to join and not express prejudice himself.

"However, I believe that we should take a kindly attitude toward men. Justice Black was honest enough to admit he had joined the organization and later regretted it. I believe we should take him at his full word."

A flood of messages commenting on Black's radio address poured in on Washington within an hour after he concluded speaking tonight.

Their volume confirmed the tremendous interest all over the Nation in the Alabaman's revelation that he once belonged to the Ku Klux Klan. The messages came from all sections.

Washington telephone company officials said there was a "very definite falling off of telephone calls" during the Justice's speech but were unable to say how the decrease compared with periods when President Roosevelt has spoken.

They said there was a decided increase in calls immediately after the speech.

Howard Man Unconvinced.

Dr. Emmett J. Scott, secretary of Howard University, told The Post: "I do not regard it as a very convincing statement."

"He is a real man and he answered the question. Now let's progress under Roosevelt," said Ed Sotto, an artist who is a Catholic and a Democrat.

"It was a typical political address," in the view of Eugene Goff, 806 Seventeenth street northwest.

There were these other comments:

Perry W. Howard, Republican National committeeman of Mississippi: "The statement convicts Judge Black not only of being a Klansman but a life member of the Klan. He said that he lost his card but did not say he declined to accept it. His appointment, therefore, was the worst mistake ever made by the President—the naming of a man who has taken an oath favoring Nordic supremacy at any price to other elements of the population."

Compared to White.

Dean Kelly Miller, of Howard University: "We cannot eternally punish a man for the sins of his youth. Thomas Dixon, jr., author of 'The Birth of a Nation,' is authority for the statement that Chief Justice White was once a member of the Klan. He presided over the Court and delivered the opinion outlawing the grandfather clauses affecting war amendments to the Constitution Let us hope the same sort of attitude will be manifested by Justice Black."

At Metropolitan Police Department headquarters, detective, patrolman and superior officer hung about available radios and, after Justice Black finished, talked of his speech in the outspoken manner of policemen:

Lieut. Cy Embry of the Detective Bureau: "I think he'll make a good Supreme Court justice. Anyone has a right to join an organization. I think his speech vindicated him."

Private Joe Caw, of the Fingerprint Bureau: "He's all right. I'm glad he resigned from the Ku Klux Klan, though."

Public Relations Detective Odessa Hunt: "He made a good speech. Hasn't he got a Catholic secretary? All these people complaining now are probably the same people who didn't vote for Al Smith in 1928."

Applauded in G Street.

G street crowds gave the new justice a vote of confidence in general when he completed his defense.

Among the 150 people who packed Gordon's Cafeteria, 1411 G street, during the speech, Carl Tacker said "Black has been entirely right all the way through this affair." A girl in Tacker's party thought it was nobody's business whether or not the justice had belonged to the Klan, and W. D. Lemmon from Georgia, believed Black had done nothing which required any defense over the air.

"Criticized No One."

The most common opinion, however, was that he had been wise to speak and had presented the best case possible. John L. Moring, night manager of the cafeteria, said the speech was "swell."

"I was glad," added Moring, "that he came right out and made his own case without criticizing anyone else."

In the drugstore at Fifteenth and G, across from the Treasury, patrons watched the clock impatiently while the band played "Take Me in Your Arms" before Black began his broadcast.

As the crowd waited, W. E. Hawes said that persecution of Black was making him the biggest man in the country.

"Able Manner."

Thomas M. Eastwood, night superintendent of the Washington Building, thought "Black put the thing up to the people in a very able manner. I am much more impressed with him now than I was before the speech."

Lawrence Casazza, graduate student at American University, said the new justice had made a capable presentation of his position. "But if he joined the Klan at one time," added Casazza, "he must have felt more or less the same way they did."

Underwood & Underwood.

Ashton C. Jones, former president of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce, told The Post: "The speech appeared weak. I think Black will be more conservative on the bench than he has been as a member of the United States Senate."

The Rev. John A. Curran, pastor of St. Charles' Catholic Church, Arlington County, gave the comment: "I thought that his address was very fair. He seems to want liberty and seems to be very liberal-minded. I see no reason why he will not be a fair and just member of the court."

William H. Callahan, traffic manager of the Norfolk & Washington Steamboat Co. and a member of the Knights of Columbus, who lives at 3901 Connecticut avenue, said: "I heard the entire address by Justice Black, and I am of the opinion that it was very straightforward and a complete vindication."

Music blared from a red-painted radio in the Owl Beer Garden and Sandwich Shop, in the 1900 block of T street northwest, the heart of Washington's Harlem. A line of colored persons sat at the counter, their hands beating time to the jazz rhythm. A counterman fiddled with the radio dial. Justice Hugo Black's voice came over the air.

Black finished and Gerald Beverly, of 1728 Sixth street northwest, looked up from his coffee. "He's still a member," said Beverly. "When you get in the Klan, it's not easy to get out. My opinion is he ought to stay where he belongs—in the Senate."

"I think the same damn thing," said a burly man next to him. "Me too," another echoed.

"I think he's still a member of the Klan," said Ledbetter. "He ought not to have a seat like that, if he's even been a member."

The Union Station, a blaze of light in the night, with its fleets of taxicabs and milling in-bound and outgoing travelers, furnished its contrasts. So did swank bars of downtown hotels and little taverns, permeated by odors of beer and steaks.

"It's evasive," said many ladies and gentlemen, about to depart South for the holidays they take in the winter.

"It was dignified. It was a wonderful speech," said others.

"Mistah Black did fine," murmured one, and then he swung aboard the train.

"But he admitted he was a member of the Klan. He admitted it," said a young lady on his arm.

"I think he's getting 100 per cent American. He quit the Klan. But I'd like to know what he intends to do about the Klan," asserted Samuel Stern, a Jewish businessman in one of the cabs outside.

"I wish the guy had said what he meant," shrugged Thomas Nally, a cab driver and an ardent Catholic, who lives in the 500 block of Eighth street southeast.

"If Black quit the Klan after entering the Senate, he's all right. But I think the last part of his speech was just political expediency," observed Alexander Kramer, 22, Jewish taxi driver, of the 1200 block of Raun street northeast.

"It's much ado about nothing," he shrugged. "I think it's darned silly to inject the religious situation into it."

He thought a minute, then tossed a scoop of ice cream into a dish.

"What did Hoover win on in '28 anyhow," he asked, "if he didn't have a lot of Klan votes?"

"The first part was fine," said Harry F. Briggs, a Methodist from South Carolina, who is in the shoe business.

"My father and grandfather belonged to the Klan when it had some significance. I never did. But you have to remember the Klan of today is just a shell of the Klan of yesterday—and not the same thing at all."

"Weak, Irrelevant."

"The last part of his speech was a little weak. He's an excellent man, though. I was just a little disappointed. I think the Klan issue is being stressed too much. The personal reference to his friendship with the Jewish gentleman was pleasant enough—but what of it? That didn't clear the issue. It seemed irrevelant."

"I thought he replied with the dignity of a Supreme Court Justice," asserted Reece Caton, a Catholic and a railroad man.

"The Klan issue is a bogey man."

"I wasn't impressed," said the pretty girl in the green hat, who sat with him. "I expected fireworks—real fireworks. I'd rather have listened to Bing Crosby or Rudy Vallee or Jessica Dragonette."

The radio was turned on especially to hear Mr. Justice Black's speech in a poolroom at Eleventh street and Pennsylvania avenue.

Ten or 12 men were playing pool and billiards at 9:30, when the clear tones of the speaker cut through the smoky haze. Not one player so much as turned his head to listen; but a handful of idlers in the room strolled over to the radio. Two of them were Government employes, the only ones present.

They listened in silence, although the constant clatter of cue against ball made hearing difficult. But as soon as the speech was concluded, a spirited argument broke out among them.

"I don't think Black answered th question," said one. "He must have known when he joined the Klan what kind of organization it was. He didn't explain why he became a member. But I don't want my name used. I'm not under civic service, and Roosevelt's a friend of Black!"

"The speech was O. K. I'm satisfied with it," his companion replied. "I was waiting for this speech to make up my mind, and I think he's cleared himself."

bia and Mutual Broadcasting networks. It was his first spoken word in defense of the widely published Klan charges. Newspapermen and photographers were barred from the Hamilton home at 3122 Tennyson street northwest, and Black entered the house before the speech from a rear driveway.

Only a small group of friends and radio technicians heard the actual broadcast. Listening intently from a room across the hall, they included Mrs. Black, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Durr and Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Foster, relatives; Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton, his host and hostess, and Miss Ann Celeste Butt, his secretary. A dinner party preceded the broadcast.

Although he made no specific mention of his future plans, Black left no doubt that he will take his seat on the Supreme Court bench when the fall term opens Monday.

Extraordinary Occasion.

He opened his speech with a statement of faith in the Constitution as the supreme law of the land and the Bill of Rights as "the heart of the Constitution."

He said any movement or action by any group that threatens religious liberty guarantees of the Constitution "is a menace to freedom."

He declared he was breaking with precedent in making the speech because the occasion was "extraordinary."

"I believe that no ordinary maneuver executed for political advantage would justify a member of the Supreme Court in publicly discussing it," he said. "If, however, that maneuver threatens the existing peace and harmony between religious or racial groups in our country, the occasion is not an ordinary one."

Black said "the insinuations of racial and religious intolerance" made against him were based on the fact he joined the Klan 15 years ago. He freely admitted this former membership, but declared he had severed this connection and "never rejoined."

"Before becoming a Senator I dropped the Klan," he said. "I have had nothing whatever to do with it since that time. I abandoned it. I completely discontinued my association with the organization. I have never resumed it and never expect to do so."

In cold, measured phrases, he told his audience he had never departed from his faith "in the unfettered right of every American to follow his conscience in matters of religion" at any meeting of any organization.

And he said he had no sympathy with any organization or group "which, anywhere or at any time, arrogates to itself the un-American power to interfere in the slightest degree with complete religious freedom."

Black charged that during his absence in Europe, "a planned and concerted campaign was begun which fans the flames of prejudice and is calculated to create racial and religious hatred."

If continued, he said, the result would be injection of religion into politics, that the "political religionist" would become a perilous influence in Government, and the "least worthy" will be elevated to political office because others are lacking the "password."

Without mentioning the name of Al Smith, a Catholic and Democratic candidate for President in 1928, he referred to the campaign against Smith and warned against resurrection of "practices and arguments from which this country suffered sorely in the 1920s."

He said businessmen and professional men whose religion is not that of their community, would be bankrupt and punished by that spirit, and he warned it "will again set neighbor against neighbor and turn old friends into new enemies."

Black said he broke with precedent in making his speech "to contribute my part in averting such a catastrophe."

Specifically, he charged an effort is being made "to convince the people of America that I am intolerant and that I am prejudiced against people of the Jewish and Catholic faiths, and against members of the Negro race." Here he offered his public record in the Senate in defense.

"No words have ever been or will ever be spoken by me, directly or indirectly, indicating that any native or foreign born person in our free country should or could be restricted in his right to worship according to the dictates of his conscience," he said.

Society Packs New Night Club

Diplomats Prominent at the Shoreham's Opening of Blue Room.

Another gala-gala in the night club line was held last evening when the Shoreham opened its new Blue room for the season. The place was packed and jammed with members of society, including diplomats, officials and residents.

When Walter Winchell heard about the proposed color scheme for this night spot, he immediately christened it the Blue room. The color scheme is a delectable deep shade of blue, interspersed with white panels and emphasized with draperies of a bright coral shade.

To get down to who was there last evening, let's begin with the Ambassador of Ecuador, Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro, who was among the guests of Dr. Homero Viteri, special Ambassador from Ecuador, and Senora de Viteri.

The other guests in this party included Senor Felipe Barreda, distinguished Peruvian visitor in the Capital and brother-in-law of the chairman of the Peruvian Boundary Commission; Ambassador Tudela, with Senora de Barreda, of Lima; Dr. Andres Belaunde, delegate of the Peruvian Boundary Commission, and Senora Belaunde; Laurence Duggan, of the State Department, and Mrs. Duggan; Dr. and Mrs. Matthew White Perry, the Secretary of the Ecuador Boundary Commission, Senor Enrique Arroyo, and Senora de Arroyo, and Miss Maxine Smith.

Commodore T. E. B. Howe, the retiring Air Attache of the British Embassy, had guests at the Blue room opening, as did Decio de Moura, Second Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy, and Maj. C. S. Ramsay-Hill, retired British army officer visiting in the Capital, wohse guests included Col. Wyndham Torr, Military Attache of the British Embassy, and Mrs. Torr.

Notables Arrive On Manhattan

Wallis Warfield's 'Aunt Bessie,' Justice McReynolds, 3 Senators Aboard.

When a fleet of tugs cuddled the Manhattan into its berth in New York's North River yesterday, its passenger list was studded with prominent names.

Mrs. Buchanan Merryman, the favorite "Aunt Bessie" of the Duchess of Windsor, was one of those who walked down the gangplank. She most likely will remain in New York for several days or so, for no definite arrangements have been made here yet for her return to 1911 R street.

After visiting the Duke and Duchess of Windsor at the much-photographed Chateau de Cande, Mrs. Merryman spent the rest of the summer in Europe. She visited Paris and later Switzerland and also attended the Salzburg Music Festival with her niece and new nephew-in-law after a visit with them at Wasserleonberg Castle in Austria.

Also aboard the Manhattan was Supreme Court Justice McReynolds.

The traveling Senators who returned to their homeland yesterday were Sherman Minton, of Indiana; Elbert D. Thomas, of Utah, and Senator James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina. Also aboard were Representative Fred Bierman, of Iowa, and Representative Virginia Jenckes, of Indiana.

Miss McCarran Enrolls In Cochran's Academy

Miss Patricia McCarran, daughter of Senator Pat McCarran, has enrolled for the fall term of S. E. Cochran's National Academy of Stage Training, and will be among the guests at a reception to be given this evening at 8 o'clock in the academy auditorium for George Vivian, the new director.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

A WEEK WHEN everybody seems to be opening something came to a climax yesterday with the first luncheon of the season at the 1925 F street club. When Mrs. James F. Curtis throws wide the doors of her former residence to members for the winter, the season, with capital letters, may be said to have officially begun.

DUDLEY HARMON.

The adjective "homey" is a horrible word to apply to a sophisticated gathering—it's a horrible word anyway—but one can't help feeling that atmosphere at parties at 1925. Perhaps the comfortable sofas, the deep armchairs, and the bowls of fresh flowers—yesterday these last were mostly zinnias—have something to do with it. At any rate, Mrs. Curtis' career as a leading Washington hostess has taught her all the secrets of entertaining, one of which we will pass on to you—the knack of having an ashtray always ready at the elbow.

• • • •

TO JUDGE FROM the smartly dressed women at yesterday's Dutch Treat gathering, Washington society is not taking up the more cock-eyed fashions described in the magazines. Hats yesterday looked like hats, and black still remains the favorite.

There were two notable exceptions to the rule of black, however—Mme. Espil, wife of the Argentine envoy, and renowned from here to Buenos Aires for her chic, wore a pale gray woolen suit with silver fox scarf. Mrs. Emmons Smith, who knows gowns, as she is in the business, sported a soft green outfit trimmed with touches of brown here and there.

There were plenty of men at yesterday's party—including a smattering of State Departmenters, and diplomats who are among the luckies not having to rush right back to a desk some where. And while enough has been written of Mrs. Curtis' menus to make any more description slightly monotonous, let this tribute be paid—while ample and perfectly cooked, hers are not the usual luncheons which leave a working man—or woman—feeling as though a good long sleep were absolutely essential.

• • • •

FROM SOME of the conversation yesterday, it looks as though chances were very slim indeed for any more of the three dances which have been sponsored there for the past two winters by Viscount de Sibour and a committee of other men. At the luncheon the viscount was trying to give away the management of these affairs to somebody else, but nobody would take him up on it. The consensus of opinion seemed to be that there are enough dances in the winter here anyway; but everyone agreed that those at the F street club should be resumed in the spring.

Mrs. Wallach Merriam was being welcomed yesterday on all sides, having just returned from a summer at Newport. As usual, she is taking several debutantes under her wing this winter, and among those whose coming-out parties she will help to arrange is Marsyl Stokes. The young lady from London will be presented at a large ball to be given by her grandmother, Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock, on the evening of December 18.

• • • •

MISS STOKES' UNCLE, Snowden Fahnestock, was present with Mrs. Fahnestock—they have the Peter Augustus Jay home for the winter. Mrs. Fahnestock was dressed all in black with a cavalier-looking hat turned up at one side.

The Fahnestocks sat at Mrs. Curtis' long table along with about 20 others, who included the Harold Hintons, Kepi Schell of the Hungarian legation, Ralph Hill and John Hinckley, Eugene Vidal, and Sir Willmott Lewis.

Mrs. Morris Clark, in a smart gray and black outfit, occupied a table with George Pulver and several other friends. In another group were Mme. Jarnefelt, wife of the Finnish Minister; Mrs. Donald Richberg, Mrs. Merle Thorpe, Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Mrs. Lewis Lauldwell, and Mrs. Walter Distler.

• • • •

MRS. MARSHALL EXNICIOS had good words to say about the English countryside, as she was welcomed back yesterday after spending a summer there. She and Marshall took a house in Devonshire and hunted, hunted, and hunted.

Two Nash Girls Will Make Debuts At Dance Dec. 23

Add one more December date to the list of debutante parties definitely slated for that month. December 23 will be the auspicious "number" on the calendar for the daughters of Mrs. Allen Nash—Elizabeth Seymour and Henrietta—who will make their debut at a dance at the Sulgrave Club.

Both are in school, so they will have a busy season of it, what with classes one minute and dances the next.

Picnic Entertains Group at Newport

One of the events of the autumn social season at Newport took place on Thursday when Miss Sylvia Szechenyi entertained a group of friends with a picnic luncheon at Bailey's Beach.

Miss Nancy Wilson and Princess Miguel de Braganza are guests of Miss Szechenyi's mother, Countess Laszlo Szechenyi, wife of the former Minister of Hungary.

• • • •

Gen. and Mrs. George Willcox McIver, who spent the summer at Edgartown, Martha's Vineyard and at Great Neck, Long Island, have returned to Washington.

Miss Cora McIver, who passed the summer in England and Sweden, sailed recently for San Francisco to spend the winter with her aunt, Mrs. Charles N. Felton.

Col. Larkin and Family To Live in Washington

Lieut. Col. and Mrs. T. B. Larkin and their family have come to Washington and will live at 1704 Nineteenth street. They formerly were stationed at Fort Peck, Mont.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Reed, of Kalamazoo, Mich., are guests at the Dodge.

Highly Seasoned Dish Is Characteristic of Old Creole Cooking.

Southern Belle's Favorite Is Adapted to Local Ingredients.

By Jean Green.

THE RECIPE CONTEST this week bows to the culinary art of Louisiana. Mrs. John M. Rogers, of 1651 Lamont street northwest, wins the first prize with her Louisiana oyster loaf.

Mrs. Rogers, who is a native of Shreveport, La., believes this dish originally came from New Orleans. She remembers it as the popular dish that the belles of the town served their swains after the ball or theater. It is highly seasoned and has the characteristic sauce and pepper of Creole cooking. Picture it served with a tart salad such as Waldorf and a simple dessert, such as fruit and cheese, or orange souffle and coffee, and you have the proper setting for it.

The dish comes to the table garnished with lemon and slives of pickle. It is served in slices. The oysters of Southern waters appeal to the taste of Mrs. Rogers, but our select oysters of small size can be used. The oysters are fried golden brown on the outside, but the center should remain soft. They can be fried ahead of time and then warmed before being placed in the toasted bread box.

Mrs. Rogers, who has lived in Washington for the past 19 years, enjoys good food. She had adapted many of her recipes to the Washington market. In preparing this dish she at first had difficulty findinng the proper type of bread for it. She now uses Pullman size sandwich bread.

Louisiana Oyster Loaf.

1 sandwich loaf of bread
1 pint of oysters
1 cup of cornmeal (about)
1 bottle of tomato catsup (medium)
1 large dill pickle sliced lengthwise
1 lemon, sliced
Salt and pepper

With sharp knife cut the top from bread, keeping top in one piece. Run knife around the sides and ends of loaf and lift out the crumb. Split this lengthwise. Toast the inside of the hollowed loaf and one of the split crumbs. Fry the oysters that have been rolled in the seasoned meal to a golden brown, but do not allow them to become hard. Now generously sprinkle the inside of the loaf with catsup and put in a layer of hot fried oysters, and over these slices of pickle and lemon. Next place the toasted crumb and proceed as before with catsup, oysters, pickles and lemon. Cover the toasted side of the cut-off top with catsup and press on filled loaf. Run the loaf into the oven to heat thoroughly. Serve by cutting through into four parts.

Individual oyster pies flavored with mushrooms will win instant favor. This recipe is "tops." It wins the second award and comes from the cuisine of Mrs. Merrill Comstock, 4000 Cathedral avenue northwest.

Oyster and Mushroom Pies.

1 pint of small oysters
½ pound of mushrooms
4 tablespoons of butter
4 tablespoons of flour
½ cup of cream
1½ cups of milk

Wash the oysters and drain thoroughly. Cut the mushrooms in pieces and saute in butter with a little chopped onion. Blend in the flour and gradually add the cream and milk, stirring constantly until the mixture thickens. Season well with salt, pepper, paprika and a little mace. Drop in the oysters and turn mixture into individual baking dishes. Cover with pastry rolled thin and bake quickly until brown. Serves six if dishes are not too large.

Ever hear of oyster omelet? Neither had we, but it will now become a regular feature on our Sunday brunch menus. It is also a possibility for Sunday supper as its name suggests. The recipe wins the third award for Mrs. Albert P. Day, Auburn avenue, Bethesda, Md.

The pan-broiled sausages are used for the garnish. These can be pan broiled first, kept in a warm place, and the same skillet used for the omelet. The golden browned oysters are cooked in the soft, tender omelet.

Oyster Supper Dish.

2 dozen medium-sized oysters
1 package of small pork sausages
1 teaspoon of salt
1 egg, slightly beaten
2 tablespoons of flour or less
½ cup of cracker crumbs
2 tablespoons of butter
4 eggs slightly beaten
½ teaspoon of salt
1-16 teaspoon of pepper
3 tablespoons of cream or evaporated milk

Place the sausages in a heavy frying pan and fry slowly ten minutes.

Wipe the drained oysters with a towel; season with salt, roll in flour dip into beaten eggs and then into cracker crumbs. Mix the beaten eggs in a bowl with the salt, pepper and cream or evaporated milk.

Heat the butter in a second skillet; fry three or four minutes. Lay the prepared oysters in the hot butter and fry until brown on the under side. Pour the egg mixture over the oysters and let cook for one minute; turn out the heat. The hot pan and oysters will aid in the cooking of the omelet.

Fold the omelet and slip into a heated serving platter; surround with the brown sausages which have been well drained. Garnish the platter with bits of parsley or cress. Serve at once with hot rolls and a green salad.

Mrs. Fay LaCour, 412 Fifth street northwest, wins the fourth award with an unusual dish that will please hamburger lovers. The dish is well seasoned, the oysters carefully concealed in the center of the dish, and the vegetable sauce you will want to make time after time for omelet or for scrambled eggs.

Oyster Meatballs.

1 small chopped onion.
1 egg.
6 slices of bacon.
Salt, pepper to taste.
½ teaspoon of celery seed.
¼ teaspoon of ground cloves.
1 teaspoon of poultry seasoning.

Mix hamburger, chopped onion, salt, pepper, poultry seasoning, cloves, celery seed, and egg. Shape the meat balls and place an oyster in the center of each ball. Cover the top with meat. Over this lay one-half strip of bacon. Place on broiler and cook in top part of a moderate oven for 15 minutes. Then place in lower oven and broil until brown.

Spanish Sauce.

3 medium sized onions
1 large green pepper
2 large tomatoes (or a small can from which juice has been drained)
4 tablespoons of grated sharp cheese
½ cup of fresh okra

Cut the onions into thin slices, chop the green pepper fine, and place in a frying pan in which enough fat has been melted to fry them. Wash okra and cut into thin rounds and add. When these are golden brown add the tomatoes and salt and pepper to taste. Last of all add the grated cheese and stir thoroughly. Remove from the fire as soon as cheese is melted and serve with the meat balls.

Bayou Oysters on Half Shell With Southern Cocktail Sauce.

Open 6 oysters per person, placing the top shell back in original position.

¼ pint of chili sauce
½ pint of catsup
Juice of 2 lemons
Fresh grated horseradish
1 finely chopped small onion
Salt and crushed black pepper

Dine Leisurely, Paris Advises Businessmen

Americans Bolt Their Food, but Cuisine Is Improving, Says Shoreham's Paul.

By Nancy Ellis.

BUSINESS waits while Paris dines, according to Paul, headwaiter at the Shoreham Hotel, who has just returned from Paris. Despite the influx of American tourists and the increased tempo of modern living, the French still decline to be hastened with their noon meal. And rightly so, thinks Paul.

"The art of dining leisurely, especially at noon, is the most important thing Americans can learn from the French," he said yesterday. "You cannot appreciate good food unless you eat it slowly, enjoy its flavor. You cannot bolt your food and ever become a civilized diner."

The noon meal in Paris, Paul points out, takes two hours. No business is transacted during that time except that which is incidentally and pleasantly conducted over the coffee cups or after-dinner liqueurs. But after such a leisurely, happy meal, believes Paul, the French businessman is better equipped to do his work efficiently in the afternoon.

Lures Gourmets.

While Paul deplores American haste in dining, he is not one of those who hold American cookery is barbaric as compared to the French.

"The American cuisine has already raised its standards up to the level of the French," he said. "However, on account of the new use of wines, I believe American dishes will become more and more similar to the Parisian."

Paris is still maintaining its lead in many special dishes, such as hors d'oeuvres and onion soup, that continue to lure gourmets from all parts of the world, Paul points out. America does not seem to be influencing French food customs any more than speed of dining. There are still no canned fruits and vegetables used. Ice creams, sundaes and sodas as we know them are not available except at American restaurants. The French have a frozen cream or "glace," but it is never served with a sauce. Frozen fruit cups are also popular.

Typical Dinner.

An important change was noticed by Paul in the service of wine. "I found that it was no longer the rule to serve a special wine for each course," he said. "The Frenchman now orders his favorite wine to be served throughout the meal and has a special liquor served with his coffee."

Serving wine instead of the cocktail with the meals is necessary if American dining is ever to become an art, Paul maintains. He feels that as the quality of the native wines improve, the custom will become more and more widespread. Travelers from the continent are setting the precedent.

A typical French dinner served at noon would include five courses, according to Paul. Often only three or four courses are chosen for the meal, but enough time is taken for dining so that the exquisite flavor of each dish is enjoyed to the utmost.

There would first be an apertif, such as suze, then melon or hors d'oeuvres. The second course would be a potage or soup. Soupe a l'oignon gratinee is a favorite. Then, boiled beef or fish served with a few vegetables. The second main course is the entrecote or grill. A roast of veal or pork is customary. Then would come a tossed green salad served from the salad bowl, and a dessert. The dessert might be cheese, such as gruyere, brie, camembert, or pont leveque or a fruit tart. During the summer fruit tarts are preferred.

Capital Dishes

THE outstanding dish of the week as seen by The Post Food Editor was the Poitrine de Capon Pall Mall served Thursday night at the opening of the Pall Mall Room at the Raleigh Hotel.

A symphony of flavors was achieved by frying breasts of 3-pound capons in golden butter until browned. Then the breasts were carefully lifted into individual casseroles and sherry wine added to the flavorful juices left in the skillet. Whole mushroom caps were added and carefully browned. This sauce was poured over the breasts of capon, additional sherry added and the whole served piping hot.

Canape Raleigh
Tortue Verte Amontillado
Pailettes au paprika
Poitrine de capon Pall Mall
Pommes Parisienne
Artichaut St. Germain
Endives a l'Estragon
Coupe St. Jacques
Migardise
Cafe Noir

Simple Frappe.

A frappe that takes no trouble whatever is made by filling automatic refrigerator trays half full of grapefruit juice and half grape fruit segments, and freezing to a mush. Serve with meat or on top of a sliced fruit cup for the first or last course.

Bacon Preserves Frankfurter Skins

Cooking frankfurters requires special care to keep them from splitting. When they are to be broiled, wrap them in strips of bacon or salt pork. The fat from these strips keeps the frankfurters moist. Place the broiler rack about 5 inches below the heat.

In cooking them on top of the stove, keep the water at a temperature below boiling. Heat only for 8 minutes.

For a special treat, split the frankfurters lengthwise. Rub the inner surface of the frankfurter with mustard, put some pickle relish in the center, and wrap with bacon, being sure to fasten the edges with a tooth pick. Bake for 10 minutes in an oven. Instead of relish, slices of cheese, pickle, or quarters of banana can be used for the filling.

The Post Features Soup 'Pick-Me-Ups' In Recipe Contest

Did you ever stop to think that one thing you can give away and still keep is your favorite recipe? In your files or notebook are tucked away recipes that you have enjoyed for years. The Post's recipe contest each week is to give you a chance to win a cash award and also to share your culinary triumph with other readers.

This week the contest is for soup recipes. While such recipes are endless, every now and then a combination is found that especially hits the spot. It may be a rich filling soup with tantalizing aroma that warms the cockles of the heart on cold days. It may be the type that can be used for a filling meal. Rich clam or oyster chowders, French onion soups, a thick vegetable soup or cream soup are only a few suggestions. All of these are perfect for the luncheon dish or for a satisfying "pick-me-up" after the hike or brisk ride.

Write out your recipe clearly and mail it before October 9 to Miss Jean Green, Post Food Editor. Five cash prizes will be awarded. The first is $3, the second $2 and the three others $1 each.

Full Cooky Jar.

The well filled cooky jar is still a potent factor in contributing to hospitality and winning friends. Their preparation can be simplified by making ice box cookies. These need not be rolled out. The dough is shaped into a long roll and sliced. Molds can be purchased so that when the cookies are sliced they will be shaped as hearts or spades.

Carrots Are Cut Like Match Sticks

Carrots become festive when cut in match-stick length and steamed for a few minutes on top of the stove in a covered stew pan. Just before serving sprinkle over the top finely minced parsley.

Fresh peaches cut in small pieces can be used in fritter batter. After the fritters have been fried golden brown in deep fat, place on absorbent paper. When free from excess fat, roll in powdered sugar and serve hot.

Fresh plums can be used in salad. They can be washed, seeded and chopped for combination fruit salad or stuffed.

Fruit Garnish Gives Meats Added Flavor

Market Now Offers Tip for Interesting Combinations.

Pears, Apples and Grapes Have an Affinity for Roasts.

FRUITS now on the market in such abundance give opportunity for the smart menu planner to personalize the piece de resistance of the meal. Roasts of meat or chops take on a new festive appearance when a well-chosen garnish of fruit is used.

Certain combinations, such as lamb chops with grilled pineapple slices and roast pork with spiced crabapples have been enjoyed for years. Their flavors seem to have a natural affinity for each other.

There are many other combinations that are good. Certain fruits such as pears, apples, grapefruit and pineapple can be grilled and served as colorful garnishes. Others, such as the plums, Concord or native slipskin grapes, which are one of the best buys this week, can be made into spiced conserve. These grapes in white, red and purple are excellent for cooking and preserving.

The flavor of different meats demand selected fruits. For roasts of lamb, grilled slices of pineapple, or orange, or grapefruit, seems to be best. For veal, there are spiced prunes, apple rings, or spiced pears. For ham, many unusual combinations are possible.

Grapes Garnish Roasts.

Tokay grapes which usually find favor only for the fruit bowl or for certain salad and fruit cup combinations is the latest addition to this list. The grapes can be stuffed and used with cress as a garnish for the cold-meat platter. They can also be split and used on roasts. On the crown roast, they can be used in place of the paper frills.

Winchester reports a record crop of apples for this fall. That is good news. Apples make a versatile garnish. Instead of using plain applesauce, try giving it a rosy glow by adding a few drops of vegetable coloring.

Another recipe that you will certainly want to try is spiced apple rings tinted a blush red.

APPLE RINGS.

4 red apples
2 cups of sugar
1½ cups of water
½ cup of vinegar
10 whole cloves
2-inch piece of stick cinnamon
Red coloring
½ cup of mint or pineapple jelly

Slice the apples crosswise into ½-inch slices. Remove the cores. Measure the sugar into the water, add vinegar and spices, and boil until the sugar has dissolved. Then turn the fire to low and add the apple slices. Cook gently until the apples are transparent. Remove from the sirup. Add the coloring to the sirup and cook until thick. Cool. Arrange around the edge of the roast. Fill the centers with the mint or pineapple jelly.

Cranberries play a double function in meat cookery. They not only add color but they tenderize the meat during cookery. They can be used in preparing pot roasts and boiling cuts of beef. For boiled meats, use 2 cups of raw cranberries with each 3 cups of beef.

HAM SLICES BAKED WITH CRANBERRIES.

3 cups of cranberries
1½ cups of honey
2 tablespoons of whole cloves
2 slices of ham, cut 1 inch thick

Mix the cranberries with the honey. Place the slices of ham on a baking dish. Spread with the cranberry mixture. Top with the second slice of ham. Garnish with the cloves. Bake in an oven set at 350 degrees for about 1½ hours. Baste from time to time.

Pronunciation Rates You

HOW VOICES carry! Easy to tell—from the pronunciation—what kind of person the speaker is! "Hello! We've an eye-DEE-a," says a girl. "A stew-PEN-dus idea," chimes another. "About the ath-LETic contest?" asks a man.

You notice they don't say eye-DEER for idea, stuPENjus for stupendous, or ath-a-let-ic for athletic. They must be Lucy, Kit and Don, who are tops with the nicest crowd in the neighborhood.

But now what a contrast! "Aw-reVORE," a girl says. "I'm nuts about your KOOP, toots. It'll take you anywhere."

That's the nobody of the block. She complains her neighbors are snobs. But if she'd learn to say "o reVWAR" for au revoir, koo-PAY for coupe, anywhere without that final "s," she'd find the "snobs" friendly and admiring.

It's so simple to brush up on pronunciation, there's really no excuse for making such slips.

Begin by checking mistakes in little words. Do you wrongly add a "t" to twice, say "twict?" Or do you give two syllables where there should be one; say "fil-lum" for film?

Then long words. Do you accent exquisite on the first or second syllable? First is right. Do you say KEW-li-nay-ree for culinary or do you mispronounce it KULL-in-ay-ree?

You're supposed to know Anglicized foreign words too. You say GONdola, not gonDOla. Vaudeville is VODEvil, not VAWdivil.

'Gooseberry Fool' Recipe Is Simple

Margaret Lindsay Picked It Up in England.

During the year Margaret Lindsay spent on the London stage she acquired more than a British accent. She also picked up some English recipes. The best one of them is a simple little dessert called "gooseberry fool."

The ingredients for this are:

½ pound sugar
1 quart gooseberries
1 cup water
1 cup heavy cream

Mix the sugar and water in a saucepan, boil for two minutes, then add gooseberries. Cook until the berries are very soft, then put the mixture through a sieve. Cool and chill in the refrigerator.

Whip the cream until it is very stiff. Fold the chilled mixture into it and serve in tall, chilled glasses.

When a container which has a screw cap is very difficult to open, simply turn the container upside down and give it a quick, stern tap against the floor or a table top. It will open easily.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Oct. 1.

RIGHT DOWN near me, on East Thirtieth street, lies the scene of one of the darndest feminine success stories of the current year. A nice, quiet girl named Bernadine Angus, out of the great State of Arkansas, has just written her first two plays—and sold both of them to George Abbott, producer of such hits as "Boy Meets Girl" and "Brother Rat."

ALICE HUGHES.

It's astonishing, and no fooling! True, Mrs. Angus has been a pretty successful penner of detective yarns for the past several years, as "Bernie Angus." But fine play-manuscripts are another kettle of broccoli, and this girl certainly must have a gift, to be able to peddle her very first pair of cracks to such an alert and able bird as Abbott, who can sniff a hit a hundred miles against the wind. But she's done it!

Bernie's plays are "Angel Island," which will be produced first, and "Home, Sweet Harlem." Both will see the footlights this season, under the Abbott banner, and if George's judgment hasn't faltered for once, Mrs. Angus will spend most of the winter depositing royalty checks.

She admits that the output of sleuth fiction has suffered seriously during her period of playmaking, but she probably won't have to worry. Two George Abbott productions in one winter, for which experienced dramatists would sell their souls if they had any, have fallen into her lap this year. First stop, Arkansas; second stop, Broadway—look out, Hollywood, here comes Mrs. Bernadine Angus!

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Oh, boy! Oh, girl. Columbia plays her first home football game of the season this afternoon up at dear old Baker Field, overlooking the lordly Hudson! Don't come pressing my door bell after noon, for I'll be up there in the bleachers giving my best senile imitation of a starry-eyed co-ed! . . .

• • • •

William Anthony McGuire, author of many "Follies" and now a Hollywood big shot, has invented and patented a new tricky coiffure. He calls it "satin hair." All right, Bill; shoot along a sample, and we'll give it a whirl. I'm tired of mine, anyway, and so are lots of the girls . . .

• • • •

New York show-goers get all sentimental about a small group of entertainers, now all matronly. The posse includes such people as Fannie Brice, Sophie Tucker and Belle Baker. The last named, who sinks sad sonks of the tinpanny type, has just taken unto herself a third husband, Mr. Elias E. Sugarman, trade-paper editor. So Broadway cried tears of joy for its dear Belle. Maybe now she will sink swinky sonks for a spell! . . .

• • • •

Sure sign of cooler climate—the White Rooshians are at it again for the season. They're opening up the Maisonette Russe at the stylish St. Regis with a benefit for wounded Russian war veterans in this country. It's a grape-harvest festival, with all sorts of quaint, Old World ceremonials. Leave it to the Rooshians to think up things here! But, alas, their uncrowned queen is still not here to have her hand kissed. The Grand Duchess Marie having spent months in India, is now supposed to be touring Europe to write pieces for a newspaper syndicate. And what is New York society without one of the most real of living Romanoffs—to take the salutes and curtseys? Why, even duller than you'd suspect, I suspect!

A Smart Fall Trio in Color for Both Daytime and Evening

Dr. C. G. Shaw Blames Unhappinesss on Males.

Dr. Charles Gray Shaw, professor of philosophy at New York University, has added a new note to the age-old man vs. woman conflict, in his declaration that the cause of most of life's unhappiness can be summed up in the one phrase: "It's a man's world."

In his new book, "The Road to Happiness," Dr. Shaw, author of "The Road to Culture" and other works, said that the standardized philosophies of happiness, like civilization, had been created by man in his own image but failed for the lack of woman's touch.

"Man has never learned to enjoy," Dr. Shaw said. "He has had all the opportunities for happiness but not the capacity. Woman, with her tremendous capacity for enjoyment, would be the happiest of mortal beings if only she had the opportunities. She often wishes she had been a man, but the man who envies a woman's being and personality has yet to be born.

Man assumes that he is making the world more attractive and comfortable for women, the philosopher said, but he blunders on without considering the interests of woman. He rarely knows what he wants himself or likes it when he gets it.

Men Are Substituting Snappy Appearance For Ego of Money, Noted Style Expert Finds

Color Finding Its Place in Masculine Wardrobe Now.

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor

"TODAY, more than ever, the ego of personal appearance is replacing the ego of money. Men are now appreciating the fact that colthes can do something for them. They want attire that has beauty appeal, clothes that are an adjunct to their ego."

These statements were made with much emphasis by Raymond Twyeffort, national authority on men's wear and head of the Merchants' Tailors Association of America, in a recent interview in New York.

Men Use More Color.

Dress for men will be far more interesting from now on, predicts Mr. Twyeffort. One reason for this is the growing popularity of color in all phases of life. "With colored motor cars, technicolor in films and bolder color in modern home and office decoration," he said, "it is a foregone conclusion that more color and design will appear in the wardrobes of fastidious men. Color is bringing about a desire for individuality since the old anemic conventions have been shattered, and regimentation in men's dress will soon be a thing of the past."

Among the new ideas for fall and winter to make men smart and distinctive, according to Mr. Twyeffort, is the pastel dinner suit. If you want to be set apart from the masses wear, instead of the conventional black, a suit of Capri, "Twylyte" blue, midnight blue, dark green, wine, plum purple or a new coronation shade which is a mixture of blue and mulberry. These will be worn for home entertaining, such as dinners, bridge and the like. Shirts, socks and other accessories, should harmonize in color tone with these new jewel-toned suits, or the effect will be incongrugous instead of smart.

Sack Coats Longer.

The last word in the realm of business suits is the cheviot sack affair in gray, brown, green and other effective fall mixtures. Many of these have cluster colored stripes. The sack coat this year is slightly longer, with slightly narrower shoulders, flat hip, and soft chest effect; it may be single or double-breasted. Many of the trousers are plain at the bottom, without the conventional cuffs; short men should wear the usual cuffed trousers, however, as it adds to their height. To be ultra-smart, wear a rough sports shirt with soft collar with a business suit, instead of the pleated short bosom and starched collar, Twyeffort advises.

For formal evening wear, tail coats are from 6 to 8 inches longer, and the leading colors are midnight blue and the new "Twylyght" blue, which is several shades lighter. The accent this fall and winter is on streamlining, simple lines and height with no unnecessary details. The correct way to measure the coat length is one-half the height, plus 9 inches. The proper overcoat to top formal evening clothes is the opera cape, lined with red, blue, white or purple; or, the silk-faced evening overcoat with cloth collar.

"To be well dressed," Mr. Twyeffort advised, "the accessories are highly important. The proper-shaped hat for the suit; the collar best styled to the individual; the shirt, tie, socks, shoes, gloves and pocket handkerchief should all be in harmony with the suit, otherwise discord spoils the picture. A well-dressed man is always an optimist, and is more apt to be a succes in business than the one who is slovenly about his appearance."

Sack Coat Slightly Longer This Year, With Flat Hips.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Care of the Throat.

The nose and throat specialist is supposed to be able to help singers improve their voices, but I doubt whether many of them really know much about it or have made any special study of voice. This is also the opinion of an eminent Philadelphia specialist, who urged before the American Medical Association a better understanding between the laryngologist and the vocal teacher.

"There are few laryngologists who have more than a meager knowledge of the art of vocal training," he said, "and there are fewer vocal teachers who have any knowledge of the anatomy, physiology or the phenomenon of voice production."

And this is strange, for the founder of our modern throat specialty was a singing teacher. Garcia, who invented the laryngical mirror in order to see his own vocal cords in action.

To keep a singer in good physical condition, a general examination of the entire body should first be made. Failure to produce good notes may be due to fatigue, general bodily weakness from anemia or other constitutional condition. "Adelle Borghi, one of the greatest mezzo-sopranos Italy ever produced, told one of her American pupils that she, at the tender age of 9 years, was examined for her physical fitness before being accepted as a pupil, because singing, being an arduous physical exercise, requires a sound physical body."

The adult voice derives its tone from the size, shape, and length of the vocal cords. Tenors mature early. According to the age when adolescence and sex maturity begin, a woman is either the coloratura, the lyric or the mezzosoprano.

An examination of the ear should be made in the case of every singer, to be sure that hearing is normal.

The larynx should always be examined, not only to see whether there is any disease present, but also to determine the length and approximation of the vocal cords. A singer who strives for a higher pitch than his vocal cords are fitted for, may strain them and ruin his singing voice forever. This straining may produce vocal nodules.

The sinus and air chambers of the nose act as resonators, and a fine singer must have healthy ones.

During cultivation of the voice, many dangers may be in the future which cannot be recognized by the ear alone. For that reason the throat specialist should be called in for periodic examination, because inflammation of the vocal cords, vocal nodules or relaxation of the cords, may indicate that the endurance of the pupil is being strained.

Transparent Closet.

Myrna Loy has a transparent container closet. She keeps her hats in transparent hat boxes; likewise her shoes, gloves, with transparent bags over her dresses and wearing apparel. The advantage is great, as it keeps everything clean from dust and at the same time you don't have to open and close boxes to see your things. It gives a very lovely effect, somewhat like glass, Miss Loy states.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

When Couple Have Irregular Income, Debts to Pay and Small Baby, Should Wife Go to Work?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have a small baby and my husband's income is very small at present as he is just starting law practice. I am undecided what to do in regard to going back to work. We have quite a few bills to pay and when my husband gave up his position to start his own practise, he said he would take care of us. However, our savings are low and soon there won't be any; we may even have to borrow money.

• • • •

I get a big kick out of taking care of the baby and would hate to leave her. But if I could find a position and get some competent person to look after her, it might be the sensible thing to do. It might keep us from having to borrow money, and also expedite the building of our own home.

• • • •

At present we are living in a small apartment over my husband's family and while they are not meddlesome, we can't turn around without their knowing it. I should like to have my own home, or a more private apartment. What do you think I should do? Should I leave my precious baby and go back to work? Or do you think she needs me and I should try to weather the storm? UNDECIDED.

• • • •

The Mother's Place.

DEAR UNDECIDED: There's no getting around the fact that every small baby needs, and thrives best on, a really devoted mother's intelligent care, and if there is any possibility that your husband can run the gauntlet of these lean days without outside help from you, I think you will be making the richest contribution to him and the child by remaining at home. The greatest incentive to success a young husband and father can have is a wife in the home who is cheerful, ingenious, thrifty housekeeper; a joyously devoted mother, and an optimistic, encouraging, happy and tender companion.

• • • •

However, in your connection with a pay check spells the difference between hopeless indebtedness and the ability to meet your monthly bills; if an augmented income is the only means of keeping your husband afloat professionally at this time, it may be wise and courageous of you to go. But don't let impatience with the monotony of self-denial, nor dissatisfaction with your husband's present limited income, nor the desire to build, in mushroom haste, a home of your own, lead you to turn over to a hireling of limited intelligence and undeniable self-interest your challenging occupation of tending the baby and making the home a place of comfort, cheer and grace.

• • • •

In returning to office work, you might be directly responsible for pulling your husband's professional punches, so to speak; you might be taking the fine edge off his ambition; making him feel, in a measure, a failure already through presumably having fallen down on his chesty promise to take care of you and the baby. Your going might make a tremendous difference in the eventual character and personality of the child.

• • • •

I hold no particular brief for young mothers who return to office and aspire to the presumable benefits of a pay check simply in order to make life a little softer for themselves and those they profess to love. I believe it is lack of true wisdom and essential character. When a mother steps out of her role to do a man's work—in the sense of pursuing a treadmill in the marts of trade from nine to five—her only true justification is imperative necessity to supply bread and butter, food and shelter. When these things are not forthcoming to her children, she must provide them as best she can; but where they are supplied, her's is the moral obligation to give to her children, through constant care and association in their formative years, that something of self which enriches their character and personality.

• • • •

In an interview granted me a few years ago, Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, curator of the division of physical anthropology of Smithsonian Institution and one of the greatest living anthropologists, said this: "Disregarding what they may say, or think they feel, women's greatest happiness will be found in husband, home, children. Her natural job is to bring up future generations. To do this properly—which means to do her best—takes a great amount of time, and no one can properly serve two masters.

• • • •

"There is a sort of life force created and disseminated by a woman who lives in close association with her children," he said. "It may be likened to sunshine. It does something for children, gives them a balance and an assurance, that nothing else can give. And there is no substitute. If they don't get it from such a source and in their childhood, they never get it in after life." M. H.

'Fashion Doctor' Declared Need of American Women

"The average American woman needs a fashion doctor to give her advice for an ailing wardrobe," says Henri Hutchinson Chatillon, of Paris, who designs for the jewelers, shoemakers and couturiers.

After looking at the women in New York restaurants, subways and walking down the streets M. Chatillon was "horrified by their sameness, their lack of harmony, with the manner in which they seem to manage to always have at least one thing wrong with their costumes."

"American women have lovely figures, they are generally well groomed, but they lack individuality," he said in a recent interview. "The worst thing that could happen to a French woman would be to see her dress on another woman. Here in the States I see so many identical dresses that I wonder sometimes whether there is only one dressmaker here. I walk up the avenue during the shopping hour and what happens—I meet 200 Mrs. Simpsons. I go to a show and see the same dress on eight different backs."

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

MAYBE the British Colonial does have a lot of sins to answer for, and a pretty soft life to explain away, what with six to a dozen servants to a family. But there's something to be said in favor of his well known propensity for dressing for dinner in the jungle because it does maintain an attitude of dignity and self-respect that makes pleasant living under any sun.

This maintaining of the little elegances of life has developed many a distinct fashion in architecture and decoration. For the Englishman, in his efforts to retain the formality of British custom, has often had to adapt materials at hand to the traditional designs he cherished. The results have been interesting always and distinguished often. Our own Federal American furniture stemmed directly from Georgian English roots.

Now along comes another British colonial style that is commanding the attention of the decorative world. This is the Tasmanian furniture that is turning up. Originating as it does in Australia, it is just as modern as you might expect but with a Georgian hand upon it.

The blonde woods used are about the color of bamboo and the lines are simple enough to suit the most sophisticated young modern. Cool-looking and serene, this new Tasmanian furniture is perfectly stunning with the powdering pastel colors in vogue now and equally good with the drab dusty tones. But later, when the vivid colors come back into fashion, it can be beautifully adapted to them if you will take care to use plenty of white with the brilliants to accentuate the blondness of the woods.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Exercise for Thighs Essential if Figure Is to Improve.

By Ida Jean Kain.

IN REVISING your curves for a lovelier figure, don't forget exercise for the thighs. With frocks hugging the figure as they do, you can no more conceal overweight thighs than you can minimize big hips. Even the slightest bulge above the stocking top will mar the effect of your sleekly fitted evening gown.

The trouble with most figures is a lack of muscle tonus, and the thighline is the most easily affected of all measurements. Certain hip-slimming exercises also recontour the thigh, particularly those in which there is a cross-swing of the legs, as in the following exercise:

POSITION—Sitting on the floor with the legs extended straight out in front. Bring the legs up and roll over on the back and shoulders, supporting the weight with the hands just under the hips. The position is the same as that taken for the bicycle exercise.

MOVEMENT—Cross the legs in a scissors motion, swinging them as far out to the sides as possible and bringing the legs across in front. A variation of the exercise is to hold the legs parallel, then separate them widely. Do not cross the legs, but continue the exercise by bringing the legs together and separating them again. Finish the exercise by pedaling the legs rapidly, as if you were riding a bicycle. The bicycle exercise slims the hips, thighs and derriere.

POSITION—Squatting on the floor, knees bent, hands placed on floor in front of body for support.

MOVEMENT—Stretch one leg straight out to the side, keeping the other leg bent under you. Return to position and extend the other leg straight out at the side. Throughout the exercise, keep the weight balanced on hands and the supporting leg.

To make use of the dance movement which gives the chorus girl beautiful legs, try kicking. Start by swinging the leg over the seat of a chair, touching toe to floor at extreme side of body, first left, then right. Twelve times with one leg, then with the other. Increase to 25 times with each leg. Now, turn the chair around and kick over the back of the chair. Kick over it—don't kick it over! You'll have to swing high, wide and handsome, but this is an excellent exercise for the thighs, hips and buttocks. When you get really good, place the chair sideways to the body and kick over the whole thing—back and seat.

Rules for Success As Party Girl Given

New York.—How to be a successful week-end "party girl" is outlined with a few simple rules in the current Liberty magazine.

"Wear good clothes but avoid anything fancy or that may come apart.

"Don't borrow your hostess' personal belongings.

"Be careful to accept invitations only from the right people and when you must tell fibs, don't get them mixed.

Bette Davis Makes Own Face Cream

Hollywood.—The latest Hollywood fad is to concoct one's own cosmetics. Bette Davis has found the perfect cleansing cream by combining two brands that were almost perfect for her skin. Madge Evans makes a fragrant cleansing lotion by mixing mineral oil and her favorite cologne half and half. Elissa Landi has long been famous for the perfume she blends herself.

Olivia de Havilland's own home beauty secret is sweetly scented hair achieved by disolving several drops of essence of geranium in her last shampoo rinse water. Veda Ann Borg has such unusual coloring—her hair is vivid red and her skin almost olive—that she has found it necessary to mix her own powder and has now perfected the perfect tint for herself.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Copyright, 1937, for The Washington Post.

For mysterious reasons, about two-thirds of the regularly scheduled press conferences of the master minds of Washington—cabinet members and emergency chieftains—are regularly canceled at the last minute on the scheduled day . . . This keeps the ace newshawks in a mild frenzy of uncertainty.

* * * *

Behind this phenomenon must be a welter of emotions and circumstances . . . The Secretary feels a little bilious after breakfast—"Cancel the conference!" he tells his aides. Reprehensibly they phone the tidings.

* * * *

A little later he feels better . . . "Tell 'em the conference is on again," he says, "I've just thought of a good wisecrack to tell the reporters." . . . The word goes out, and the journalists cancel their golf dates.

"—off again, on again"

Around noon the Secretary gets a phone call from another Grand Vegetable . . . "How about a little golf this afternoon?" . . . "O. K.," says the Secretary. "Cancel the press conference. Anyhow, I've forgotten the funny story I was going to tell the newsmen."

* * * *

But it begins to rain . . . The golf date is off . . . "Shucks!" says the Secretary. "Phone the boys I'll have my press conference after all. They kinda brighten a dull day, bless 'em." . . . It begins to look like a press conference. The journalists sharpen their dialectic darts. The chief object of a press conference is to get the Big Shot out on a limb, if possible.

* * * *

Now the Secretary has a moment to glance at the papers . . . He stumbles into an item that infuriates him. "Why, these blankety-blank police reporters!" he shouts. "I don't see why I ever tell 'em anything! Cancel the press conference."

* * * *

The early afternoon editions come in . . . The secretary reads a statement by his Cabinet colleague, the Secretary of Public Enlightenment . . . The reporters have patched together a pretty fair story from his evasions, a story which makes him a statesman of the second water, vintage of Gladstone. "If he can make Page 2 with that stuff," storms the secretary, "I can crash the front page. Tell 'em the press conference is on. One hour late."

* * * *

But his aides know better. "The Secretary isn't sure yet whether he'll hold the press conference or not," they tell the newshawks, who are getting a bit casual about the whole thing anyhow . . . They have the right hunch, too; about 3:15 p. m. the Secretary's maiden aunt from Milwaukee shows up. "I've always wanted to see what your office looks like," she says . . . "Cancel the press conference," says the Secretary.

"—she sees him at the helm"

But the Secretary's aunt has a shopping date for 3:30, which amazes him, for most of his aunts like to sit around and watch him run the government when they're in Washington . . . "Call in the newspapermen," he said, "I want to practice saying No."

* * * *

Fortunately, his aides know better than to try to round them up at this hour . . . By this time they're probably deep in Munsterberg or Bryce, or at the movies, or reading Calvin Coolidge's "There Stands Massachusetts." . . . "Your Undersecretary asked the month before last to see you right away, Sir," the aides suggest. "Maybe you'd better see him now, and cancel the press conference."

* * * *

So the press conference is definitely off . . . Only the President keeps his dates with the press infallibly, and his conferences are never dull . . . Most of these duels of repartee and artful questions, (what aviators might call a dog fight, with muzzles) are conducted on the theory that two negatives make an affirmative . . . The reporter's strategy is to jockey the mastermind into uttering an even number of "Noes"—Since 10 Noes can be boiled down to five affirmatives in the story for next day's paper.

P. U. C. Seeks Quick Repair Of Car Tracks

2-Year Work Necessary; 14th St. Intersection to Be Clear Tuesday.

More than $1,000,000 worth of track improvements scheduled for the next year were discussed yesterday by engineers of the Capital Transit Co. with the Public Utilities Commission and Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways.

Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the commission, expressed approval of the progress made in track rehabilitation, but explained the commission wished to expedite the program.

"We want the rough tracks eliminated as soon as possible so that the public won't be shaken so much while riding," he said, "and so that the cars will hold up better."

Two Years of Repairs.

Keech expressed belief it would require about two years more to bring the track repair program up to normal. The street railways got behind, he said, during the long merger negotiations.

Among the projects contemplated by the transit company are track replacements on Fourteenth street, from Decatur street to Colorado avenue, and Constitution avenue to Pennsylvania; Georgia avenue, Florida avenue to V street, new tracks for proposed Dupont Circle underpass, and the Peace Monument loop.

The transit company announced yesterday illuminated route numbers will be in operation on the Buchanan division, involving street cars and buses, on Sunday.

Eventually, the company said, all of its 550 buses and 600 street cars will be equipped with the permanent route signs.

As traffic began to flow freely yesterday for the first time since August over the stretch of Fourteenth street between F and Pennsylvania avenue, construction work at the intersection of F and Fourteenth was rushed toward completion.

Will be Open Tuesday

The thoroughfare will be open to traffic from all directions Tuesday morning, construction officials said yesterday, and will be finally completed in a week or ten days.

Work has been begun this week at G and Eleventh streets on old tracks.

One of the busiest crossings in the city, the corner of F and Fourteenth, for some weeks has had the appearance of No Man's Land.

Traffic Patrolman H. H. Hartman is unperturbed, however, as he has been stationed at the same post for more than 20 years.

Kentucky Voids Approval of Child Labor Act

By the Associated Press.

Frankfort, Ky., Oct. 1.—Holding the proposed child labor amendment to the Constitution had been definitely killed when three-fourths of the States rejected it, the Court of Appeals today invalidated Kentucky's ratification of the proposal earlier this year.

Previously—in 1926—two years after the proposed amendment was submitted to the States by Congress, the Kentucky Legislature rejected it. However, at a special session last January the General Assembly ratified it and Gov. A. B. Chandler forwarded the certificate of ratification to Washington before being served with papers in a suit contesting the Legislature's action.

The appellate court—highest in the State—held that the proposed amendment was withdrawn from further consideration when more than one-fourth of the States had rejected it, and that more than a reasonable time had elapsed since its submission by Congress in 1924.

The court's opinion said that at the time the Kentucky litigation was started 28 States had ratified the amendment and 20, including Kentucky, had rejected it. Of the States finally ratifying the proposed amendment, 21 previously had rejected it, but on reconsideration, similar to the situation in Kentucky, adopted the measure. Of the original 26 rejecting it, 21 duly certified their rejection with the Secretary of State.

Petworth School Parents Threaten Strike for Heat

Twenty parents of children attending Petworth School last night began an action which would bring their youngsters out on strike unless school classrooms are adequately heated.

They were members of the executive committee of the Petworth Parent-Teacher Association who recommended to the parent body that pupils be kept from classes "until repairs to the heating plant are completed and the school is properly heated."

Announcement of the committee's action was contained in a telegram sent by it to Mrs. Henry G. Doyle, president of the board of education, and advising that the committee would recommend the strike at the association's next regular meeting, October 8.

The telegram was signed by Mrs. E. K. Allen, president of the association.

The house which benefits children, such as Elinor Ann, is at 470 N street southwest. There'll be lots of workouts for the boys in the new annex gymnasium, made from what was a stable. And there will be classes in carpentry, metal work, weaving, sewing, cooking, art, and music. The house is one of eight settlements in various parts of the city. Herman Riley is physical director.*

'Fight to Finish' Assured, Says Chinese Author

11,000 Hear Address by Dr. Lin and Contribute $2,000 for Refugees.

"Knowing China as I do, there is not the slightest doubt that China will fight to the finish until Japan, economically exhausted, withdraws from the conflict."

A slight, thin, Chinese author and philosopher last night analyzed the Sino-Japanese conflict for more than 1,000 people who crowded First Baptist Church at Sixteenth and O streets to contribute more than $2,000 to war refugees in the Orient.

"There are three things," Dr. Lin Yutang said, that we contribute: "China's determination to fight to the finish, her unity against the entire conflict, and the great leadership she has found in the person of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. Defection is utterly unthinkable, if one knows modern China and knows that the stake she is fighting for is her own independence and national existence."

Dr. Lin said the present undeclared war in the Far East will "set Japan back by more than one generation," and denied China desires involvement of other nations.

Criticizing the isolationist policy as "both morally and physically untenable," Dr. Lin said "real isolation is nothing but self-deception."

Widowed Mother Of 6 Takes Potion 'To End Suffering'

After writing a note which simply said, "to end my suffering," the widowed mother of six children attempted suicide yesterday afternoon by swallowing a slow acting poison. Still conscious, the woman, Mrs. Esther Lewis, 1824 H street northwest, was taken to Emergency Hospital, where she was in a critical condition.

Miss Laura J. Pederson, also of the H street address, stated that Mrs. Lewis, whose husband was a veteran of the Spanish-American War, was the sole support of her family. The youngest child is about 18 months old.

Except for a small pension, Mrs. Lewis, a Mexican, was said to have had no income beyond her earnings from part-time employment at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. She is about 35.

Congratulations, Mr. and Mrs. Macaque!

Yours is the honor of being principals in the first blessed event among the new collection of animals which arrived at National Zoological Park this week from Asia and Africa.

Arrival of your tiny heir—the little monkey—was duly announced yesterday by Director William M. Mann and, to commemorate the occasion, we're going to make junior an eligible in The Post's Zoo Names Contest. Though, no doubt, no matter what he's named you'll still call him a little pest.

And don't have any qualms, Mr. and Mrs. Macaque, as to the kind of name your son (or daughter—none of us knows yet) will get out of this free-for-all competition. The dozen or so nominations for the Komodo dragon which came in yesterday indicate, on the whole, that the folks on the other side of the cages are taking this contest pretty seriously.

They aren't sending in suggestions like Marmaduke, Stinky, Sloppy Joe or any other of that type such as even a Mama and Papa Monkey like yourselves might resent. Nearly every response in yesterday's mailbag was arrived at quite logically.

Take Mrs. C. V., for instance. She thinks the giant Komodo dragon should be named Fafnir, after the giant who turned himself into a dragon and guarded a treasure. Isn't that nice?

Mary E. W. leans to Drako, because it is a combination of the first syllables of dragon and Komodo. Not bad. J. W. likes Komodore, which speaks for itself, and another suggestion along the same line is J. G. W.'s Komodragon.

Then there is Jessica, contributed by Mrs. B. M., who follows it with (Dragonette) so everyone will catch on. By the way, Dr. Mann himself doesn't know yet whether this is a boy dragon or a girl dragon, but don't worry about that.

Personalities and events in the news are projected into the naming circus with the Ku Klux of Miss B. B., and a Hitler (anonymous). Those are not barred, of course, but remember that today's headlines are tomorrow's memories.

Also bear in mind that, although a different entry blank is printed daily, you don't have to wait until the animal or animals of your choice come around before mailing your suggestions. Send them in any time—your proposed tags for the clouded leopard, pair of giraffes, pair of African buffalo, amethystine python, pair of blue sheep, the babirusa pig, pair of shoebill storks and all the rest. The coupon is published only for your convenience.

Shoebills

The zoologist calls this rare bird Balaeniceps rex, or something, but the Zoo can't afford to set up a first-aid service for people who sprain their tongues trying to say all that.

So just you sit down—or it will be perfectly all right if you stand up, for that matter—and dope out a couple of good, pronounceable names for the new pair of shoebill storks in National Zoological Park. They are probably the most valuable birds in the entire collection.

To give you another lead or two, this specimen comes from the valley of the White Nile, is ashy colored with blacking wings and tail, possesses the biggest bill this side of a night club on New Year's Eve, and always looks like it had just swallowed a lemon.

Fidelity Reform Fails in First Count of Votes

Mailed Consents May Give 75% for Reorganizing Defunct Bank.

The fate of funds invested in the defunct Fidelity Building & Loan Association was still in doubt last night, 24 hours after the deadline for approval by Fidelity shareholders of reorganization plans offered by the First Federal Savings & Loan Association.

Receiver James H. Nolan announced yesterday he had consent from investors holding $2,790,000 out of Fidelity's total share liability of $4,400,000. The original offer of the First Federal Savings & Loan Association was contingent upon acceptance by holders of 75 per cent of the shares.

In a letter written yesterday to Comptroller J. F. T. O'Connor, Harry P. Somerville, president of First Federal, stated that many instruments of consent mailed by shareholders Thursday might not be received by Nolan until Friday or Saturday, and proposed that final tabulation of replies be delayed until today.

Added uncertainty as to probability of securing 75 per cent acceptance has been expressed because of improper execution of agreements by some Fidelity investors whose shares are included in the $2,790,000 registered as approving reorganization by First Federal. Examination of these consents will take place early next week.

If final figures fail to reach 75 per cent of the total investment in Fidelity, Comptroller O'Connor will be forced to decide between liquidation proceedings and consideration of a new offer from the savings and loan association.

Stains on Shirts Caused by Berries

Although the whereabouts of Charles Lynch, 32-year-old Washington man missing in Texarkana, Ark., remained a mystery last night, Department of Justice laboratory experts announced the "bloodstains" on several shirts sent to his mother at the Willard Hotel were "nothing but huckleberry juice."

Lynch was reported missing after a night club fight in Texarkana. Papers bearing Lynch's name were found in an abandoned car near the club.

Both Mrs. Blanche Lynch, his mother, and another son, Buford Lynch, local attorney, said last night they had received no word from the missing man. He left Washington three weeks ago. At one time he was employed in the procurement division, Treasury Department.

Taylor's Bond In '35 Murder Case Forfeited

Money Paid in Court When Indicted Rum Runner Fails to Appear.

A $2,000 bond, set in District Court nearly two years ago for the appearance of Albert Taylor, rum-runner indicted on a second degree murder charge, was forfeited yesterday by Bondsman Louis Weintsein.

Weinstein appeared in court and posted a check covering the entire bond. He indicated, however, that his search for the long-missing Taylor will continue "until we get him."

It first came to public attention after the Washington Criminal Justice Association exposed apparent laxity in District Court bond procedures.

The trial was first set in June, 1936. Taylor was present in court for two days awaiting to be called. When the case was reached the third day, Taylor had disappeared.

Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue ordered the bond forfeited in June, but kept the term of court open for 30 days. This allowed Weinstein to recover his money if Taylor was captured. Later, the term was extended. This extension expired yesterday.

Tuberculosis Aide Is Asked At Gallinger

Dr. Ruhland Seeks Funds to Hire a Full-Time Ward Director.

Attending Physicians Now Assigned Part-Time to 170 Cases.

A full-time director of the tuberculosis ward at Gallinger Municipal Hospital was urged yesterday at a meeting of Health Officer George C. Ruhland's special advisory committee on tuberculosis.

Dr. Ruhland has asked funds to employ the director in his estimates for the next fiscal year, now being considered by the District Commissioners.

The health officer said the director is essential if the department's campaign to lower Washington's high tuberculosis rate is to be effective.

There are now 170 tubercular patients at Gallinger and 200 beds, but all the attending physicians are assigned to the ward on a part-time basis. These are in addition to the District tuberculosis sanatoria, one of which was opened this month.

Washington's death rate from tuberculosis last year was 662, which was at the rate of 107 per 100,000 population as compared with a national death rate of 55 in 1935.

Among the physicians who attended yesterday's committee meeting were:

Dr. James G. Townsend, of the District Tuberculosis Association; Dr. Earl McKinley, dean of the George Washington University medical school; Dr. David V. McCauley, dean of the Georgetown University medical school; Dr. Roy Adams, of the United States Veterans' Administration; Dr. John Minor, specialist, and Dr. Edgar Bocock, Gallinger superintendent.

Agencies Stress Need

Desperate need for more convalescent homes was stressed by executives of 12 of the city's leading health agencies at the first fall meeting of the health committee of the Council of Social Agencies.

A constant list of from 50 to 60 invalid children waiting for care at the Christ Child convalescent farm was reported by Miss Anna Keady, director of that agency.

Dr. William F. Nelson, director of the Medica Chirurgical, Negro medical society, reported that the lack of any convalescent homes for Negroes was placing a heavy strain upon hospitals, which must keep patients who could be sent to a convalescent home but are too ill to return to the poor and usually crowded homes from which they come.

Mrs. Wade Martin, director of the Washington Heart Association, expressed the belief that cases of chronic invalidism could in many instances be prevented if convalescent care were available to cardiac children.

Children's Hospital reported that children are being kept in the hospital at a cost of $4 a day who could be cared for in convalescent homes at a cost of only $2 a day if such homes were available.

'Unreality' Subject Of Science Church

"Unreality" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The golden text is from Jeremiah, 2:5: "Thus saith the Lord, What iniquity have your fathers found in me, that they are gone far from me, and have walked after vanity, and are become vain?"

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "The prophet that hath a dream, let him tell a dream; and he that hath my word, let him speak my word faithfully. What is the chaff to the wheat? saith the Lord." (Jeremiah, 23:28.)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Entirely separate from the belief and dream of material living is the life divine, revealing spiritual understanding and the consciousness of man's dominion over the whole earth."

Washington's Historic Churches

St. John's Became 'The Church Of Presidents' in Madison Term

In 1816 Committee Offered Free Pew to Chief Executive; He Accepted But Paid Rent; Mrs. Taft and Mrs. Wilson Present Occupants.

Pre-eminent among Washington's historic churches is St. John's Episcopal, "the Church of Presidents." The tradition which associates the building with the White House began in 1816, the year of its completion. According to the minutes of the vestry, a committee was formed in December of that year to wait on President Madison and "offer him a pew in this church, without his being obliged to purchase same."

Madison accepted the offer, choosing pew 54, but paid the rental every year of his term of office. The same pew was occupied by Monroe, Adams, Jackson, Van Buren and Harrison and still is set aside for each successive President.

Although President Roosevelt does not attend St. John's, he visited it for a few minutes of prayer on his two inauguration days. Mrs. William Howard Taft and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson now occupy pew 54.

In St. John's, Quaker Dolly Madison was baptized and confirmed an Episcopalian. The building was the scene of the funerals of William Henry Harrison and Zachary Taylor.

St. John's was the second building erected on Lafayette Square. (The White House was the first.) Designed by Benjamin Latrobe, it originally was in the form of a Greek cross with a flat dome and a lantern cupola. The steeple was added a few years after its completion, and at the same time the Doric portico and the side vestibule were built.

Later in the century the original brick paving of the interior and the box pews were removed. A chantry was added in the rear and stained glass windows were installed.

Present pastor of the church is the Rev. O. J. Hart.

'Where Hope Can Come True' Is Sermon Topic of Dr. Clinchy.

In co-operation with the national movement to observe loyalty days in church today and tomorrow, the First Congregational Church is designating tomorrow as rally day in all departments and services.

"Who Wants to Kill You?" is the Rev. Howard Stone Anderson's sermon topic for the 11 o'clock service. The 8 o'clock service will be the first one of the season, and will feature congregational singing of old gospel favorites from the screen, and a question box conducted by Mr. Anderson. The questions discussed will be: (1) Does asking questions save any souls? (2) Does past membership in the K. K. K. disqualify one for membership on the Supreme Court? (3) Is it more Christian to be neutral or to defend the weak, as in the Japanese-Chinese conflict? (4) Was recent vandalism (which was principally on store windows of Jewish merchants) an indication of anti-Semitism? (5) Should like-minded Protestant churches unite? Mr. Anderson also will give an 8-minute address, "This Is The Day!"

Mount Pleasant Congregational. "Where Hope Can Come True" is the sermon subject of Dr. Russell J. Clinchy, pastor of the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, tomorrow morning at the 11 o'clock service.

Capitol Screen Goes Ritz With Football Yarn

'Life Begins in College' Is Craziest Comedy Zanies Have Had.

Crammed with action of the most delirious sort, packed almost as tight with jingly songs and rowdy-dow dances and terminating with the most completely lunatic football game that ever used yard lines for the measure of its absurdity, "Life Begins in College" will be found an antidote for all seriousness by those who can either take their gridiron or leave it alone.

This initial starring vehicle of the Ritz Brothers sets them down definitely, once and for all, as the screen's champion clowns. In the insanity of their contributions to the hilarity of the pigskin opus currently on view at Loew's Capitol these three young fellows establish themselves as much likelier candidates for the insane asylum than the Marx Brothers and mouthers of twisted lyrics quite the equal of the Yacht Club Boys.

The Ritz Brothers' idea of college life is not only enough to shock audiences, but its hoop-de-do should send them home in the skylarking mood. These Ritz boys should give us the address of their college. We would all go there. Especially if we were sure that Joan Davis, Tony Martin and Nat Pendleton would be coeds along with us.

This light-hearted and really delightful musical will give happiness and relaxation to no end of folks. The Ritz Brothers have started a college that will first startle moviegoers with its fresh and youthful humor and then enlist them by myrriads as collegiates.

It Is To Laugh.

It is true that their implied criticism of the higher education is slightly indelicate. But criticism is futile when it leaves one helpless with laughter. A laugh is a laugh, and fun is fun, and our best recommendation for a bubbling good time is to take "Life Begins in College" and the Ritz Brothers—in a big dose. It will be good for what ails you.

While the Ritz Brothers are the core of the show, they have the advantage of amazingly smart support. Handsome and melodious Tony Martin, the Comical Joan Martin and the growlingly effective Nat Pendleton all help along. Add also great old Fred Stone, Ed Thorgersen, Jed Prouty and Gloria Stuart, and there is a cast that is something to talk about.

The story deals with the ambition of the Ritz Brothers to be great college men. As a story it sounds like one of those things, but with tricky direction and smart acting—it's something else again and no end amusing.

The "Big Apple" dancers of Harry Crosley are veritable plums of entertainment in a smartly rounded stage show, to get fruity about it. The Crosley "Big Applers" roast their apples in an amazing swing time that puts a quietus on that rumor that the "Big Apple" is just a new version of the Virginia Reel.

Just as though the "Big Apple" wasn't enough to get an audience all excited, there are Nelson's boxing cats, quite as hot as the wrestling matches. Also hot-stepping Billy Reed, the graceful Yates Sisters and those master showmen, William and Joe Mandel, who head the stage bill.

Life may begin in college, but your good time will begin whenever the Capitol show starts. It is neat and sweet entertainment all the way.

All we can say about that title up there in the fine print is that this may be Bulldog Drummond to Hollywood, but not to us.

Our first Drummond was Ronald Colman and he was brave, intelligent, resourceful and as swashbuckling as it is possible to be in tweeds. This Drummond, with no offense to the very pleasant Mr. John Howard, is entirely too young, naive and frankly a bit on the dumb side. Colleague Algy, who would never take a prize for brains, solves as many problems as Drummond; his butler is a big help, and one Col. Neilson is positively brilliant, solving conundrums on the spot. Nothing much is left to Drummond except a certain stalwart charm, blundering courage and love. The latter is made difficult by the fact that he is separated from his lady fair from the word "go" until the final curtain. Ah, well!

Everything is very juvenile about this opus, particularly the plot. It has to do with a surprisingly thick Capt. Drummond, who allows his fiancee to be kidnaped, then carefully follows the silly instructions of a dastardly couple who lead him on a sort of treasure hunt, with the aforementioned fiancee as bait.

We kept hoping that the picture really wasn't as pointless as it seemed. We envolved a nice little salvation for it. We were sure that the whole abominable plot was a cooked-up job, arranged by the fiancee in cahoots with everyone except Drummond, to give him one last good dose of adventure before marriage and prepare him for comfortable relaxation before the fire and a tranquil domestic existence, but it was not to be.

The cast is pleasant enough, although this is one of those efforts which keep the actors too busy moving around to let them act. John Howard, attractive and active, seems much too young for the worldly Capt. Drummond, but meets what demands are put down upon him. Louise Campbell, new we think, is a natural, appealing and pretty brunette. E. E. Clive and Reginald Denny are rather fun, and Mr. Barrymore is in and out of make-up continually.

The subsidiaries include the cute but affected Mistress Sibyl Jason in a Technicolor "The Littlest Diplomat," Hal Leroy clogging away in "Ups and Downs," a Newman travelogue and the newsreel.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Technicolor Production Is Georgeous Spectacle of Modes and Music.

"VOGUES OF 1938." Walter Wanger's all-Technicolor picturization for United Artists of a screen play by Bella and Samuel Spewack, costarring Joan Bennett and Warner Baxter, with Mischa Auer, Helen Vinson, Marjorie Gateson, Alma Kruger, Alan Mowbray, Jerome Cowan, Hedda Hopper and Roman Bohmen, augmented by Georgie Tapps, the Wiere Brothers, Virginia Verrill, Fred Lawrence, Gloria Gilbert, Rocco and Saulter, the Olympic Trio, the Four Hot Hells and Victor Young and his orchestra. Directed by Irving Cummings. Reviewed Friday morning at RKO-Keith's Theater.

A more suitable subject than "Vogues of 1938" for the exposition of the seemingly limitless potentialities of natural color photography could not have been hit upon.

BELL.

Primarily a fashion show, magnificently embellished with displays of advance modes in every fabric, texture and fur favored by those who frequent the smartest style salons, "Vogues" also encompasses a framework of comedy-drama upon which are festooned episodes of fast action—popularly supposed to be the bane of the Technicolor cameras—spirited musical numbers and some startlingly picturesque dances that introduce lighting and color effects that are as new to the screen as they are original in conception and execution. There is not a flicker or a blur in the entire panorama of multicolored and spectacular scenes, whatever their nature.

The story the picture unfolds follows familiar lines. It is a deft transplantation of the fable of "backstage" difficulty that so long has been made the basis of musicalized film plays to the ateliers of those inspired stylists who manage to keep one leap ahead of the changes in feminine wearing apparel. Thus a new and novel note is introduced in the development of the serio-comic tale of a presumable bride who left her groom waiting in the vestibule while she cast her lot with the designer of her trousseau, as a model.

The flavor of the theater creeps in when the male modiste's wife surrenders to a tremendous and unfortunate ambition to be starred on the stage. Her husband backs her show and goes broke with completeness and considerable dispatch when it flops in Boston before ever reaching Broadway. How that debacle served as the means of salvaging his own business, outwitting his bogus Russian rival and putting the annoying jilted groom in his place is made the basis of the play's climax and most opulent pageantry. It all dovetails nicely into a pattern of extravagant and amusing entertainment.

Introduces New Effects.

Technicolor has achieved extraordinary results in registering this pretentious undertaking upon pigmented celluloid. It has produced effects never before seen, even in what have been looked upon as the best of the earlier adventures in recording the tints of nature. So delicately have the filters been adjusted that many of the scenes in "Vogues" become exquisite studies in color blending, with dainty pastel shades shimmering naturally through diaphonous chiffon and georgette draperies, sequins flashing brilliantly in the stronger lights and the richest of furs disclosing tones and depths no camera ever before has caught. No less effectively have the dim lights of early dawn and dusk and the blazing electric signs of Times Square at the theater hour been captured for the astonishment of a surprised and unbelieving vision.

A tour of the gayest night spots in Manhattan, including the fabulous Cotton Club and El Morocco, is another source of wonder at the perfection that has been reached in the photographing of indoor scenes. It is in the Cotton Club that the bizarre dance tableaux are revealed as new triumphs in prismatic splendor.

Through all of this, that fragile little story, by Bella and Samuel Spewack, bobs up persistently, with Warner Baxter and Joan Bennett scoring emphatically at every bob. Technicolor is a potent factor in permitting the junior Bennett to reveal how lovely she really is. It does a little less handsomely by Mr. Baxter, solely for reasons of gender, but never fails to enhance the richness of every scene in the long footage of the film. This impression of kaleidoscopic beauty is immeasurably enhanced by the almost constant background of parading mannequins adorned in the habiliments of the ultraswagger and very rich.

Boasts Brilliant Cast.

While the semidramatic narrative is secondary to the visual wonders of the Wanger creation, there is present a supporting cast that may not be lightly overlooked. Such players as Helen Vinson—who is done least justice of all by the new photographic process—Alan Mowbray, Hedda Hopper, Alma Kruger, Mischa Auer, Marjorie Gateson and numerous others of like standing serve as assurance enough that the "plot" is adequately interpreted.

Four whistly songs—"That Old Feeling," by Lew Brown and Sammy Fain; "Lovely One," by Frank Loesser and Manning Sherman; "Red Hot Heat," the Harlem number, and "Fall Fashion Forecast," by Louis Alter and Paul F. Webster—lend the action a contagious rhythm and verve that adds another important asset to the man- this release can boast. Specialty numbers by Georgie Tapps, dancer; Virginia Verrill, the Wiere Brothers, Rocco and Saulter and the others listed in the small-type paragraph preceding these remarks, have the same enlivening effect. No wonder "Vogues of 1938" scored a $125,000 week at New York's Rockefeller Center!

Only a Pathe News and a new "Screen Snapshots"—and an awfully good one—supplement the feature that will do so much to establish Technicolor as an indispensable aid to realism in the filming of future screen plays. No judicious amusement-seeker will want to miss this one.

Reveals New Beauty in Technicolor

Cast opposite Warner Baxter in Walter Wanger's "Vogues of 1938," Joan Bennett, whose latest portrait study is reproduced above, currently discloses the full measure of her beauty and charm on the screen at RKO-Keith's. Appearing in the central role of an opulent study in feminine modes and smart fashion salons, the youngest of the Bennetts does as much for Technicolor as Technicolor does for her.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Oct. 1.—Idol Chatter: Might be a good idea for American colleges to establish courses in glamour—it pays better dividends than most professions. Spencer Tracy says he is not superstitious—but he has a fit if anyone whistles in his dressing room. Cited for the Croix de Merite: Olivia de Havilland—completely disregarding stellar practice, she is always on the dot for her appointments. Herbert Mundin's great ambition is to play "Pickwick" on the screen—and why not?

SPENCER TRACY.

The blank cartridge in today's publicity broadside: "June Lang and Louise Hovick, working in the hot sun yesterday, ate ice-cream and went home with severe stomach aches" . . . Ho hum! Not satisfied with singing operas, Grace Moore is composing one. No love lost: Sonja Henie and Loretta Young, whose dislike is Powerful. Chester Morris has started a new fad by sending colored photographs to his fans. One word description of the Ritz Brothers: maniac-torish.

Ask any girl in Hollywood to name her ideal man and the odds are that she will mention Wayne Morris. Carole Lombard has lost interest in star sapphires—she is collecting diamonds now. Today's human nature note: Dick Powell spent $200 for wood-working tools, made a cigarette box and bragged about how little it cost him! Constance Bennett once planned to be a nun—imagine! I used to think sunbathing actresses who complained about aviators being Peeping Toms were talking for publicity—but after talking with a pilot I know, I am not so sure.

Played golf with a very disguested "Good Samaritan"—Richard Arlen. Several days ago a former big-shot actor called and begged Dick to use his influence to get him a job. Said he was up against it and would welcome anything. Dick, touched by the man's self-professed plight took an afternoon off, made the rounds of the studio casting offices and finally persuaded the casting director of Paramount to give the down-and-outer a five-day bit $15 a day. This morning the supplicant telephoned again. "Just what the hell do you think I am—an extra?" he demanded furiously. "I can't work for $15 a day—I have more self-respect than that!" Dick glommily told me that he is through trying to do favors for people—but I happen to know the Arlen sympathy too well to believe him.

After all these months, I have discovered the secret of those amazing make-ups worn by Paul Muni and Luise Rainer in "The Good Earth." Make-ups so perfect that one day on location, I talked for ten minutes with Paul without recognizing him. They wore "maskmobiles"—an invention of Jack Dawn, one of Hollywood's experts. He makes a plaster cast of the player's face and on that cast fits and shapes a plastic mask. Once the compound has "set," it can be put on and discarded as easily as a glove and it is so light and flexible that the rippling of the actor's facial muscles shows through.

Maskmobiles are being created now for every actor whose role demands a radical change in facial appearance and you can expect new authenticity in Hollywood's historical dramas.

Ran across an amusing kid story at Twentieth Century-Fox. The other day Shirley Temple's standin, Mary Lou Islieb, was ill and a substitute had to be found. Being behind schedule, the director impressed the first youngster who came along. A blonde Shirley Temple wig, a dress like the little star's—presto—the requirements were filled. But the youngster was insulted and furious. You see his name is Joe—Joe O'Brien—and he resents being "dressed up like a sissy girl."

Palace

The clash between the underprivileged of the slums and their gold-plated neighbors of the swanky apartment house, edging upon New York's East River, continues a second week on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater as a tribute to the discrimination of Washington theatergoers.

Adapted with unusual skill by Lillian Hellman from Sidney Kingsley's fine stage play, "Dead End" adheres with admirable fidelity, in the main, to the vivid study in caste and environment embodied in one of the most applauded stage productions of its season. To the picturization of the play Samuel Goldwyn has brought all of the resources at his command. Mr. Kingsley has lost nothing at Mr. Goldwyn's hands.

The major roles are as well cast before the cameras as they were behind the footlights. Sylvia Sidney and Joel McCrea, as the ambitious tenement dwellers, play their roles with sincerity and earnestness and make their triumph over the sinister influence of Humphrey Bogart's homicidal "Baby Face" Martin a cause for rejoicing. More important than any of these three, however, are the kids from the original Norman Bel Geddes stage production, who form the predatory gang of wharf-rats that motivate the action. They are the most perfect juvenile actors the screen has known.

Others in the cast who lend contrast and equilibrium to the drama include Wendy Barrie, Claire Trevor, Allen Jenkins, Minor Watson and a long list of subsidiary players.

The single setting—modified slightly in effect by clever camera angles—is a faithful reproduction of the remarkably realistic waterfront scene captured for the stage. So gripping is the movement of the melodrama that the singleness of its setting is never obtrusive.

A major supplementary of the bill is Pete Smith's "Pigskin Champions," in which he points out humorously the many superiorities of the Green Bay Packers as best of the professional football teams. "Events of the Day" also are shown, with Mr. Justice Black the chief item of news interest.

"THAT CERTAIN WOMAN." Warner Brothers picturization of a screen play by Edmund Goulding, costarring Bette Davis and Henry Fonda, with Ian Hunter, Anita Louise, Donald Crisp, Hugh O'Connell, Katherine Alexander, Mary Phillips, Minor Watson, Ben Welden, Sidney Toler, Herbert Rawlinson and Duane Day. Directed by the author. Previewed on Wednesday, September 29. At the Earle Theater.

Mary Donnell never should have married that gangster when she was only 16. It shadowed the ensuing few years with disappointment, sorrow and tragic despair, because when the right lad did come along his rich father could see in Mary only the sort of person who is referred to with raised eyebrows as "that certain woman." The old gentleman was a bit adamant and on the "old fogey" side, but he held the purse hand and tricked their marriage onto the rocks. So Mary went back to work for the lawyer-playboy who loved her better than he did his wife. Then the lawyer-playboy died in her apartment, and the elder Merrick seemed to have things all his own way—until the boy came back from a tragic honeymoon abroad, discovered that he was the father of Mary's son and told the old man what for.

Such is a sketchy outline of the salient drift of the utterly serious melodrama that Edmund Goulding both wrote and directed for Warner Brothers as a co-starring vehicle for Bette Davis and Henry Fonda. It moves swiftly and with many stirring climactic touches but remains a play that is at bottom one that should bring the tears to any susceptible eye. In contemplating this item, however, it was always the melodramatic, rather than the pathetic, that stood uppermost in the mind of this observer. The tenderer moments of the emotional gamut somehow failed to penetrate his rhinoceros hide sufficiently to reach the lachrymose glands This, quite obviously, was his own bachelor fault and not due to any deficiency on the part of Mr. Goulding or Miss Davis and Mr. Fonda and their competent associates. But there it stands.

Has Fighting Spirit.

Not by any means her greatest role, Mary Donnell nevertheless is a character that affords Bette Davis a considerable play for the lustrous talents that once won her an academy award for the finest screen acting of her sex. Miss Davis makes of Mary a natural, harassed young woman, with more than a spark of the old fighting spirit in her nature, who gives the senior Merrick a bad minute or two now and again. Henry Fonda, as Jack Merrick, the weakling husband of two attractive young women, is a convincingly rattle-brained young man who derives his chief ballast from the bottle. He does well with a role that would put two strikes on any actor before he started. Donald Crisp does even better as his father, the Midas who finally breaks down and discovers there is such a thing as forgiveness under certain inescapable circumstances.

The remainder of the cast play with skill and precision in assignments that are held to a rigid adherence to the exciting qualities of the story, without too much attention to its possible rubbleties of characterization and treatment. Foremost among them are Ian Hunter, who turns in his customary smooth job as a sorely stricken counselor and friend; Anita Louise, uncommonly fine as the second Mrs. Merrick, crippled in the motor car smash on the Riviera; Hugh O'Connell, a contradictory reporter; Mary Phillips, a terse and outspoken companion of Mary's, and Master Dwane Day, a unique example of how cryptic a 4-year-old lad can be in all that he says and does. Katherine Alexander, Minor Watson and Herbert Rawlinson are others who help in the general direction of a balanced capability.

Cugat on Stage.

On the stage at the Earle yesterday afternoon, Xavier Cugat, who brings his rumba and tango orchestra back to the Capital to provide the week's living entertainment, seemed in an aggressive and possessive mood. He permitted his instrumentalists to drown out Miss Audrey Sieber's announcement of his presence and then subordinated all of his singers but a too lusty baritone to the blare of his band, waving them into pianissimos only to provide subdued accompaniments for his own musicianly violin solos.

Opening with the familiar "Italian Street Song," Gertrude Wirth would have proved a pleasing soprano if the orchestra had given her a chance. A dance team, whose names I understood to be Marin and Girardo, offered complex routines in striking contrast to the "Big Apple" agitations of Ann and Charly, billed as Puerto Rican exponents of these fast rhythms. Apples do not grow in Puerto Rico. A rough-and-tumble interlude of comedy gymnastics interrupts Senor Cugat's syncopations at another time to enable Marion Belett and the English Brothers to demonstrate that Miss Belett can take it.

Aside from their terrific fortissimos, the Cugat interpretations of Italian rhythms are in a class by themselves. One has to be born, rather than educated, to these tricky compositions and none can play them better than Cugat.

The Paramount News, bearing down appropriately on the Black incident and the strange animals discovered on the "Island of the Sky" in the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, is the only screen auxiliary of a feature that provides swift, if not completely convincing, entertainment for adult audiences with a little more breadth of vision than Merrick, pere.

By LEONARD LYONS

October 1.

JIMMY MATTERN, who has been hunting for the Russian flyers lost at the Pole, will sue the Soviet government for $25,000 for the services rendered. Sir Hubert Wilkins, who joined in the search, won't get any share of this. Wilkins is now on the coast, buying two planes in preparation for his return to the search . . . W. C. Fields is balking at returning to his broadcast series, because of too much blue-penciling of his scripts . . . The Embassy newsreel took down its sign: "Horrible Executions by Japanese." The newsreel shots showed two Chinese, blindfolded and kneeling, being shot. Actually, the films were made in 1931, and the victims were looters, shot by their countrymen. Three hundred prints were issued and have been recalled.

LIBBY HOLMAN attended the Gloria Baker debut at Sands Point and was a house guest of the Howard Dietzes that night . . . A 17-year-old freshman, ill because of too much champagne, volunteered to drive her to the Dietzes. They finally arrived—after two stops to permit the collegiate to dispose of the disturbing champagne—and the socialite youngster almost collapsed on the lawn . . . Why don't you stay in one of the spare rooms," the solicitous Miss Holman suggested . . . "Oh, no," the lad protested, "I don't want to cause a scandal" . . . "Don't worry about that," Libby returned. "I promise not to tell anybody that drinking made you sick!"

THE LIGHTING for the new Kaufman-Hart show, "I'd Rather Be Right," will be done by a man named Feder, who was employed by the Federal Theater. He was given the assignment because of the excellent lighting effects he achieved in a number of WPA plays . . . While working for the Government, Feder was given free rein—as far as finances were concerned—to attain the tricky effects . . . Last week he presented his estimate to Producer Sam H. Harris, who was shocked at the amount. "Listen," Harris replied, "please remember one thing. My name is Sam—not UNCLE Sam!"

GEORGE S. KAUFMAN lunched with Moss Hart, and Hart asked: "Say, what's Billy Rose up to?" . . . "Your waist!" Kaufman described . . . Hart's woes aren't over. He ordered a swimming pool built at his new 87-acre Pennsylvania estate, named Hard Luck. The builders finished the pool, sank the concrete—but the pool's in the wrong place, and blasting will have to be done. Moss, therefore, has changed the name of his home to Pot Luck . . . George K. Arthur, star comedian of the silent screen, just completed a six-month advertising course at N. Y. U. . . . Sherwood Anderson has finished one act of a play which George Jean Nathan considers the finest ever written. Nathan can't get him to finish it, because Anderson feels that the subject—the Negro problem—is too stale for the drama.

MUCH NEWSPAPER SPACE has been devoed to the question of whether or not Broadway is passe. The French Casino, with its new, superb show, gave first response. The Cotton Club, presenting the finest revue of its long succession of hits, fired the second shot . . . And last night the Paradise Restaurant—in a show headed by the amazing Georgie Tapps, surrounded by the most beautiful girls ever collected under one roof—delivered the final and convincing answer. Broadway never has seen its like, and the Paradise revue makes the street gayer than it's ever been before.

JOHN B. ROYAL, the National Broadcasting Company executive, has been signing noted dramatists to do radio work. He contacted Noel Coward and outlined the writing requirements in great detail . . . Coward was very attentive, listened carefully, and then Royal asked: "Well, how about it?" . . . Noel was very calm. He merely ran his finger under his chin and replied: "I'd just as soon cut my throat!"

GERTRUDE LAWRENCE'S COLLAPSE in Washington wasn't due, as reported, to the shock caused by Osgood Perkins' death. She merely misplaced her glasses and got a headache . . . Stanley Walker will go to Texas next month to lecture at the Institute of Letters there . . . Although Hemingway and Jay Allen will have their names listed as editors of the forthcoming Ken, Arnold Gingrich's name will be up there as boss . . . They're calling Jules Glaenzer "the Ward McAllister of Reuben's." . . . Jack McManus will become the new film critic for the magazine Time.

Trans-Lux

Mr. Roosevelt and Justice Black split the national newsfront between them this week and the Trans-Lux program presents some excellent shots of both gentlemen, both unusually calm, both gay and even nonchalant. The Klan Dragon, in camera interviews, declines to give the reporters anything that even faintly resembles news on the Black episode.

Pathe presents a new short feature, modeled on the "March of Time," providing the usual trio of subjects, treated with skill and brevity, but somewhat lacking in tempo and narrative substance.

As the Japs pound away at Shanghai, China complains to the League of Nations—you see both—and in America, science (with television announcements), auto racing, bronco-busting, boat regattas, debutante fashions, cotton price shifts, Mr. Nelson at golf, the Ritz Brothers, Vittorio Mussolini in Hollywood, and W. G. Fields, hale and hearty ready for a return to the screen, crowd each other for prominence before the lens.

Oh, yes, there seems to be a lot of blasting going on—Wisconsin loses a mountain, a Chicago meat plant gets afire with its blast, and out in Colorado 60,000 pounds of dynamite play havoc with a good-sized hill.

This Morning

World Series Prices Are Too Steep.

By Shirley Povich.

The thought has occurred to this department that the baseball people are charging too darn much for their World Series, even if they are getting away with it nicely.

All summer, it's a fine proletarian game, with the four-bit, six-bit and buck-ten fans paying the freight, and then every October it goes snooty with its fancy World Series prices.

POVICH

They hike the 55-cent seats to $3.50 per copy, the $1.10 tickets to $5.50 per throw, and the $1.65 and $2.20 seats to $6.60. And then they rub it in nicely by making the folks take the tickets in three-game lots, and laugh you down if you can't afford to treat yourself to more than one game.

It's a fine going-over that the average fan gets. All summer it's his small but consistent contributions that make the World Series possible and then when the thing finally comes to a head and the supreme thrill, they take the thing away from him and give it to the moneyed folks of the land.

* * * *

Sure, they always fill the parks at World Series time, even at those fancy prices, but that ain't saying they fill 'em with the true fiber of fandom. The average fan who can't take that awful three-game rap at $9.90, $16.50 or $19.80 for a strip of tickets is home at the radio or milling about the newspaper scoreboards. As likely as not the folks at the ball games are there because it's the thing to do if you have the wherewithal to do it—go to the World Series.

* * * *

Business concerns, especially in New York, used the World Series, as they do the big fights, to enhance their connections with out-of-town buyers. Big shots who probably haven't seen two ball games all summer gobble up the fanciest seats, tossing off heavy checks with no regard for the cost. If there's a cab driver, waiter, barber, office clerk or laborer in the stands, the chances are he's spending his vacation money.

* * * *

There's no guarantee that it's going to be a better show than the ordinary league game, anyway. And there is a very grave probability that it won't be half as thrilling a ball game as an one of a half hundred that was played during the regular season. In fact, if stripped of its glamour and the great crowds, the chances are that it may be a very dull ball game.

* * * *

In the first place, everything is against the possibility of the spectacular. The two clubs are too darned afraid of losing to make for any particularly bold or daring play. The difference between the losers' end and the winners' end is too much to take any chances with. Caution is the keynote, usually, in World Series baseball. A couple of last-place clubs, with nothing at stake, might make it more interesting.

* * * *

And there's no guarantee, either, that one or the other World Series clubs won't be farcically outclassed and that the fans will be sitting in on a one-sided rout. Back there in 1927 and 1928 when the Yankees won two consecutive World Series without losing a game, it wasn't a contest, it was an exhibition!

* * *

Sure, they present the best club in the American League playing the best club in the National League, and that, of course, is something to see. But at those prices they charge, the presentation loses some of its attractiveness. If those two clubs were able to fetch only $1.10 during the summer for grandstand seats, that $5.50 tax in the World Series has all the earmarks of rank profiteering.

* * *

And those World Series clubs are not operated by poor, struggling club owners who must clean up on the World Series to make a paying proposition of the season. Generally, the clubs that win the pennant have already made a wad of dough out of the regular league season, and the World Series represents just so much extra gravy.

* * *

But the average fan who can, luckily, scrape up enough dough to get into a World Series game, may take satisfaction out of the fact that his dough is bringing happiness to that poor, down-trodden class of slaveys known as big-league ball players.

* * * *

Because these ball players, be it known, are so shockingly underpaid that their average salary is no more than $7,000 per year, which is scarcely enough to keep body within soul. That World Series winner's share of $6,000 each, or even that loser's share of approximately $4,200 might enable the poor guys to tide themselves over the winter without further contributions. Perhaps I'm all wrong. Maybe the fans' dough is well spent.

Preeminent Headed for Favoritism

Meets Rough Time and High Fleet in Test; First Post 1:30.

By Walter Haight.

The rustle of the two-dollar bill, the jingle of change, the clang of the starting bell, the traditional "They're off," the thunder of hoofs and the wild shriek of the longshot player—all these things and the many others that go to make up the sport of kings will be part of today's program at nearby Laurel. Yes, the bangtails have moved right up to the front door of the Nation's Capital for a 25-day stay in nearby Prince Georges. The horses will go round and round for the next month and there seems little likelihood that this merry-go-round will break down.

The customers, of course, will have there ups and downs but for the most part they seem assured a high class of racing. While they lacked some in quantity, the opening day's entries are fairly boiling with quality and it the handicapper's dream comes true there will be seven photo finishes and I wouldn't bring up even a hint about the outside horse.

Sprinters hold the spotlight on the initial card of the meeting. A classy group of fifteen horses of known ability for picking up and setting down their hoofs over the six furlong route have been named for the $7,500 added Capital Handicap. Most prominent in the line-up from a betting angle is Hal Price Headley's Preeminent. Winner of the $3,000 Fall High Weight Handicap at Belmont two weeks ago, the son of Supremus stamped himself as a weight-carrier of parts and he has his work cut out for him this afternoon when he picks up 125 pounds.

Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Speed To Spare and Chanceview also are well liked.

Other short-distance racers nominated for the Capital dash today were Motor City Stable's Appealing; Calumet Farm's Crossbow II, George Garrett's Carnarvon; Everglade Stable's Deliberator; Bomar Stable's Grand Slam; Maemere Farm's Go Home; A. J. Joyner's High Fleet; Mrs. W. P. Stewart's Mower; J. Y. Christmas' Rough Time, Shandon's Evergold and Bright Light, and Tranquillity. Farm's Wha Hae and Capt. Cal.

Rough Time trailed Preeminent only by a length in the Newport Handicap at Narragansett while giving the Headley colt nine pounds in the weights. The latter will carry top weight, 125 pounds, tomorrow while Rough Time will bear six pounds less.

The Capital Handicap is the first of nine stakes to be renewed during the twenty-seventh annual fall session at the Maryland State Fair course, which has been freshly beautified after months of preparation.

War Admiral, the 3-year-old champion, worked a half mile in 48 4-5 seconds yesterday and Trainer George Conway said the Glen Riddle colt might start in the Maryland handicap Saturday, October 23, a $7,500 added event for 3-year-olds exclusively. War Admiral hasn't started since he hurt a hoof in winning the Belmont Stake.

General Manager Frank Brady spent over $90,000 in improving this plant. Turnstiles will be used at all entrances. The Williams electrical camera, which photographed all finishes at Empire City, N. Y., will see services here. The Williams electrical board will show the progress of the first five horses in every race. This board is located in the center-field, while the camera is atop the grandstand.

The placing judges, stewards, cameraman and announcer will all be housed in special booths suspended from the roof of the grandstand. The space formerly occupied by the judges stand has been converted into a winner's circle.

Rules of the Maryland Racing Commission will be enforced by Stewards Bill Harron, Al Weston and Vincent Treanor. The first name is the commission's representative steward.

Wagering will be in charge of H. A. M. Frank. The daily double will be held in each day's first and third races.

Maryland Meets Pennsylvania Today in Renewal of Rivalry

Renewal of a grid rivalry that started in 1922 and ended the next year is on the program at Franklin Field in Philadelphia this afternoon when Maryland University's eleven invades that section to oppose the University of Pennsylvania team, which is opening its sixty-first season.

Not since that memorable battle in 1923, which took place in the same stadium, have the two schools opposed each other on the football field. Pennsylvania had defeated the Old Liners, 12-0, in 1922, and entered the '23 fray a heavy favorite to repeat by at least that margin.

Although Maryland was forced to play the entire 60 minutes with but 13 men available for play, they held the Quakers scoreless throughout and cashed in on a field goal by Johnny Grove, the thirteenth man, to win, 3-0.

Every Maryland man knows that story and although the Terp team will be the underdog today, the same spirit that won that game is being counted on today in the hope that a comparable upset may be inscribed in the Maryland book of victories.

Little is known of Maryland's power. Although Coach Frank Dobson's minions routed St. Johns College, 25-0, last Saturday in the opening game, nothing was proven in the way of offensive strength and today the Free Staters remain somewhat an unproven eleven.

They will be expected to do some fast proving of their mettle, however, if they intend to return to College Park the winner. For Coach Harvey Harman will oppose them with a team of 10 lettermen and a 198-pound sophomore, named Jimmy Connell, who are said to be eyeing a great season.

Jim Meade, who played second fiddle to Bill Guckeyson last year in the Terp backfield, will carry the brunt of the ball carrying today and will be aided by Frank Skotnicki, a shifty elusive sophomore, who is fast proving himself a quick-break artist, who can slip in and out of tacklers' hands with the greatest of ease.

Ralph Albarano, who will play tackle in the place of John DeArmey, who held down that position in the opening game, represents the only change in the Maryland line-up.

Charles Weidinger, Frank DeArmey and Fred Hewitt will complete the backfield. Hewitt, who is not likely to start, will see service whenever the services of an expert passer are needed to avert a lacing at the hands of the home team.

Cardinals to Travel.

The Washington Cardinals baseball team will travel to Fairlawn Sunday to meet the unbeaten Hillcrest A. C. at 3 p. m.

15,000 Set To See Navy, Citadel Play

Hardwick Will Start the Same Team That Met W. & M.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 1.—In its second football game of the present season, which will be against Citadel here tomorrow, the Navy will start exactly as in its opening game against William and Mary. Irwin Fike, big left end, is still below perfect condition and will not play.

Meeting a light but very fast and aggressive team, which is adept in forward pass playing, the Navy hardly expects to equal the 45 to 0 score made against William and Mary. Slade Cutter, who scouted the Bulldogs against Newberry last Saturday, stated that he expected the Navy to score four or five touchdowns, rather than the seven registered against the Indians.

The Citadel squad arrived early this afternoon and worked out on the Navy field. The Navy team also finished its preparations with some formation work and signal drills.

The first Navy team has been given just enough offensive work during the week to keep it up to the standard in this particular, and several afternoons have been devoted largely to defense against the forward pass.

The Plebes, who also made an auspicious start last Saturday, by defeating the George Washington freshmen, 19 to 0, will meet Massanutten Military Academy tomorrow.

World Trot Mark Is Broken Again

Dean Hanover, champion 3-year-old trotter, lowered his own world's mark for three heats by a stallion when he won the fifty-ninth renewal of the $2,000 Kentucky stake in 2:00¼, 2:00¾ and 2:00¾. He was driven by L. B. Sheppard of the Hanover Farm's organization.

Second in the race was Arden Homstead's Honeymoon and Dunbar Bostwick's Hollyrood Audrey II was third.

Columbus Wins Third In Row From Newark

Newark, N. J., Oct. 1 (AP).—The hard-hitting Columbus Red Birds made the champion Newark Bears of the International League look like just another ball club for the third straight time tonight as they beat them, 6 to 3, in the third game of the little world series before a near capacity crowd of 17,000.

Yanks Drop 4th in Row To Newsom

Red Sox Jump on Gomez in First for 3 Runs, Win, 4-2.

New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—Lefty Gomez, getting his final tune-up before the World Series, was beaten today as the Boston Red Sox landed on him for three runs, and went on to a 4-2 victory over the Yankees. The game was called in seven innings because of darkness.

The defeat—fourth in a row for the Yankees—ended Lefty's five-game winning streak, during which he had pitched three shutouts and given up only three runs in 45 innings. It left him with a season record of 21 victories and 11 defeats.

Colonials' Passing Rolls Up Advantage

Kaufman Pitches Pair of Touchdowns in First Half but Deacons March to Score; Blocked Kick Aids George Washington.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

With a bit of backfiring and a bang, George Washington's 1937 football machine rumbled down the gridiron at Griffith Stadium last night to a 34-6 victory in its first trial spin of the season, leaving in its wake a bruised, battered and decisively beaten Wake Forest eleven.

It was not exactly a case of hit and run, however, as any of the 14,000 fans who witnessed the incident will testify, for the sputtering Colonial machine didn't do much running in the first half. The monkey-wrench in the machinery was, in two words, Wake Forest, which exhibited its customary disregard for the host team's advance press notices and proceeded to give it a marathon for its money in the first two periods.

George Washington left the field in possession of a 13-6 lead, but visibly worried by the Deacons' persistent offense and down-right stubborn defense. For a time it seemed that the game would develop into a repetition of their 1936 meeting, a heart-stopping battle decided after official playing time had expired.

Class, Weight Tell.

But class, adequately bolstered by avoirdupois, told in the end, and Wake Forest, a trifle groggy from the continual pounding, was wilting rapidly at the finish. Once Jim Pixlee and his assistants made a few adjustments, the G. W., the old merry-go-round, began grinding out touchdowns at a pleasant speed.

The Carolinians made some of Pixlee's pet pupils look awfully bad for 30 minutes, however, using innocent-looking reverse plays to rip the strong side of the line to shreds for innumerable gains. They boxed in the ends, carried the tackles wide and ran roughshod over the guards before Pixlee got around to correcting his team's faults. After that it was all G. W., and the Colonials put their rivals to flight.

The Deacons lost precious little time mustering their first of three scoring threats, taking the ball on the initial kick-off and marching down to George Washington's 8-yard line. Dave Fuller and Bill Eustler led the drive, which culminated in two unsuccessful goal line passes. Eustler almost converted it into a touchdown, but caught it beyond the end zone.

George Washington's first touchdown followed in quick order, Leon Morris getting possession of the pigskin for his mates on Wake Forest's 34-yard line, where he recovered Fuller's fumble. Two line plunges, plus a forward lateral, Kaufman to Morris to Mahan, gave the Colonials first down on the 21-yard stripe before Kaufman shot another pass to Bob Nowasky in the end zone for the score.

Deacons Not Feazed.

But this failed to feaze the Deacons, who took the kick-off and marched 54 yards without a halt for the tying score. Eustler inched over for the touchdown after two bristling line bucks had been repulsed by the Colonial line.

George Washington assumed the upper hand midway in the second half, scoring on the first of two blocked punts, and thereafter was never headed, although it was not until late in the third quarter that Wake Forest's big guns appeared to be permanently silenced. Lloyd Perry, it was, the towering end, who thrusts his bulk in front of Roy Evans' toe, blocked the kick, recovered the ball, and ran 34 yards to the goal line unmolested.

Two of the downtown school's last three touchdowns were of the stock variety, and the other resulted from another blocked punt. Vic Sampson, substituting for Joey Kaufman, galloped 18 yards around end for a score, and shortly before time expired, Elmore Borden tossed a pass to Bob Faris for 25 yards and the last touchdown. In between Ted

$50,000 Belmont Futurity Is Lure for 15 Juveniles Today

15 Entered In Futurity At Belmont

Tigers Likely Choice in $50,000 Race; Two Other Stakes.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 1.—The battle for the 2-year-old turf championship comes down to the Widener straightaway at Belmont Park tomorrow with 15 high-ranking juveniles named for the $50,000 Futurity.

The 6½-furlong dash, second richest race in the world, is the leading event on a triple-stake program, which will bring a quartet of long-distance runners together in the 2 miles of the $5,000 Jockey Club Gold Cup and nine jumpers in the $10,000 Grand National Steeplechase.

Given fair weather upward of 25,000 fans are expected to turn out for the final day of racing at the beautiful Long Island track. The racing strip is expected to be at its best for the rich program.

The Futurity numbers among its overnight sentries every important stake winner of the year with the exception of Teddy's Comet, which finished in a dead heat with Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Tiger in the Arlington Futurity, and Can't Wait, winner of the Junior Champion at Aqueduct. Neither was eligible for the race.

Tiger, a brilliant winner since running last in the Junior Champion nearly a month ago, is the 6-to-5 choice to lead the way down the chute. A speed demon from the barrier, the son of Bull Dog is expected to step in front soon after the rise of the barrier and stay there all the way, despite the fact he'll carry top weight of 126 pounds. He will have a capable running mate in Mountain Ridge.

Second choice, at 5 to 2, in the prerace wagering is Hal Price Headley's three-play entry of Menow, Bourbon King and Dah He. Menow is considered the ace of the trio by reason of his galloping victory in the Champagne, the race in which Mrs. Mars' highly regarded Sky Larking broke his leg and was destroyed.

Grouped close behind the Headley horses are C. V. Whitney's combination of Daubер and The Chief, Trainer James Fitzsimmons entry of William Woodward's Fighting Fox, Ogden Phipps' Magic Hour and the Wheatley Stable's Quick Devil and Warren Wright's Bull Lea.

Big Tackle Will Be Lost For 6 Weeks

By Jack Munhall.

A surprisingly strong Washington and Lee eleven invaded Central yesterday and dealt the Mount Pleasanters their worst beating in three years by a score of 26-6.

Some 1,500 persons watched Coach Johnny Baker's heavier Light Blue and White men completely outplay the hosts, who dropped their third successive game, and also received a serious blow to interhigh hopes as Hugh Cramer, 220-pound all-high tackle, was removed from the game late in the second quarter suffering from a dislocation of the right elbow. He will be lost to the team for at least six weeks.

Washington and Lee started slowly, feeling out the locals in the first quarter, but warmed up to the task and shoved over a pair of touchdowns in the second period, another in the third and the final one in the last, to match Central's lone 6-pointer.

Following a 50-yard punt by Bob Goldsworthy, Central little blond halfback, the invaders took the ball at midfield in the second quarter, and in three plays set it down on the Central goal line. Tommy Simpson, a whirling dervish of a halfback, launched the drive as he sliced through right tackle for 13 yards to place the oval on the Central 37.

Here a tricky reverse, Simpson to Forrest Tucker, 6-foot-2, 202-pound fullback, gained 12 more yards, and W. and L. had another series of downs on the Central 25.

Less than three minutes later W. and L. again struck pay dirt. And again it was Simpson who started the trouble for Central. Taking the leather on the W. and L. 45, he smashed left tackle on a spinner for 5 yards and then faded back on his own 40, hesitated as his blockers skillfully dropped the onrushing line and fired a bullet pass to Jim Milks, end. Milks plucked the ball from the air on the Central 10 and scored standing up.

Simpson's rush around right end for the point was stopped by Sam Fox. W. and L. led, 12-0.

Late in this same third quarter W. and L. moved on a sustained drive which featured the running of Tucker and Simpson from its own 40 to place the ball on Central's 1-yard line as the quarter ended.

On the first play of the final period Tucker crashed center to register the third touchdown. Fox blocked Anderson's placement, but when Central was offside he got another chance and was successful. Score 19-0.

Central came back fighting furiously in an attempt to ring up its first points of the 1937 season and did with a dramatic suddenness. Hancock took Anderson's kickoff on Central's 40 and was dropped on the Central 35.

Bullis Prep Swamps Roosevelt, 28-0

Led by a pair of bruising backs, Sherry Warner and Chet Lee, a powerful Bullis Prep eleven ruined Roosevelt High School's opening football game yesterday afternoon at the Roosevelt Stadium by routing the Rough Riders 28-0 with an effective aerial and ground attack. 2,000 persons saw the contest.

Lee, a shifty halfback and Warner, fullback, between them figured in scoring all the Bullis points. In the first quarter the former broke away for 25 yards to score on an end run and again in the third period tallied on a tackle smash after a 30-yard gallop.

Warner passed to Ted Correll, end, in the second quarter for one score and then registered the final six-pointer on a 2-yard plunge through center.

Roosevelt outweighed and comparatively inexperienced, never had a chance against the invaders. It's farthest advance into the enemy territory was halted on the 25-yard line when a back fumbled. These same fumbles continually cramped Roosevelt's attack on the few occasions it began to function.

Capt. Ed Vasvary and Micky Beck proved to be a great pair of defensive guards for the Rough Riders while Fred Mundy was the best back.

Wilson Loses To St. Alban's By 12-6 Score

Center Frank Slingsluff Intercepts Pass to Make Winning Points.

In the season's opening football game for both teams, St. Alban's Prep defeated Woodrow Wilson High School, 12 to 6, yesterday afternoon on its Massachusetts avenue field.

St. Alban's scored in the first quarter when, after a 25-yard forward pass, Eric Danielson to Ed Rothe, placed the ball on the 10-yard line. Danielson plunged through for the touchdown.

St. Alban's won the game in dramatic fashion in the final minutes of play when Center Frank Slingsluff intercepted an enemy pass and raced 35 yards for the score.

Catholic U. Eleven Meets Loyola Today

Iore Than 10,000 Fans Are Expected to See Bergman's 'Unknown Quantity' Face Tough Foe; Hard Contest Expected.

One of the season's earliest intersectional attractions will be staged this afternoon at Brookland, where a Catholic University eleven of undetermined caliber tangles with Loyola of the South at 2:30 o'clock.

A throng of 10,000 fans is expected to see the battle, which promises to develop into a brawl between powerful lines and fast-breaking, hard-hitting backs. The Cardinals turned in a smashing 14-to-6 victory over Canisius College in their inaugural, while Loyola was turning Spring Hill over its collective knee and administering a 19-to-0 spanking.

"Dutch" Bergman, Catholic's cagey mentor, believes Loyola will put his men to the acid test, and that if they get over this hurdle they will have a good chance of compiling an impressive record. While the Cards turned in a good victory in downing Canisius, Bergman would rather wait and see what they do today before deciding how good they are.

"Moon" Mullins, serving his first season at Loyola's helm, entertains a similar feeling toward the host club, for he counts the Cardinals one of his toughest opponents. The Spring Hill game showed Mullins the potentialities of his club, but he's afraid C. U. packs too much of a punch for his pupils.

Catholic's line demonstrated its potency last week at Buffalo, where it stopped Canisius' backs for no gain throughout the entire first half. The opposing backs weren't even getting up to the line of scrimmage, and Canisius would not have had possession of the ball in Catholic's territory but for the District team's fumbles.

In Wayne Ambrose, center; Frank Cairo and Leo Katalinas, tackles; Al Sabo and Capt. Vic Sochon, guards; Calabrese and Kasunich, ends; the host eleven has one of the finest sets of forwards in its history. Kasunich, however, is not scheduled to appear in the starting line-up because of a minor injury, but will be replaced by Lou Shine.

Loyola's line, possessing the speed and sting of a bumble-bee, shoved Spring Hill around almost at will last week, and figures to give the Brookland boys all they're looking for. The Southerners will be outweighed considerably, but that will be an insignificant matter, for they are out to prove that their 6-0 decision over C. U. last year was no fluke.

Virginia Tech Faces Vol Eleven

Blacksburg, Va., Oct. 1.—Virginia Tech's football forces faced toward Knoxville today, primed for a determined battle with the Vols of the University of Tennessee.

The Techmen plan to wage the same sort of spirited fight against Tennessee that won the acclaim of the fans at the Duke game last week. They promise an attack that won't be easy to stop, either on the ground or through theh air.

Georgetown Opens With Shenandoah

'Dress Rehearsal' Seen as Small Opponent Is Doomed.

The opening curtain in Georgetown's Theater, which is featuring "An Ambitious Schedule," will be raised this afternoon when the Hoyas entertain the Shenandoah University football team at Griffith Stadium in a game that will parallel a dress rehearsal for the Hilltoppers.

Actually planning for the Holy Cross game next Saturday, Georgetown will mark time by dusting off the small Virginia eleven, hoping to brush up on weaknesses which will best come to light in the heat of a real battle.

So at 2:30 Coach Jack Hagerty will unveil the representative of Georgetown football prestige by sending a strong line-up against Shenandoah. Well-conditioned after a two-week stay at Fort Monroe, Va., the Hoyas have been put through strenuous training sessions in preparation for today's game and subsequently the tougher ones on the schedule.

Hagerty appeared to be viewing the world through rose-colored glasses at the conclusion of the final workout yesterday and gave his hearty approval to the manner in which his backs were executing aerial and trick plays.

The passing will center around diminutive Tom Keating, veteran back, who passes with all the agility and accuracy required by a first rate college heaver. Maury Nee, at one end, and Al Synder, at the other, are expected to be perfect targets for the passing of Mr. Keating, and behind the stone-wall line that Hagerty has molded, Georgetown is expected to run up a big score against the Virginians.

With Red Hardy at center, Clem Stralka and Jack Robertson, who, incidently, is the only new man in the line, holding down the tackle positions, and Joe Frank and Tom Shuker, at the guard posts, Shenandoah is hardly expected to gain through the line, but, instead, is said to be planning to take advantage of a known weakness that exists in the G. U. pass defense.

| Georgetown. | Position. | Shenandoah. |
| (7) Snyder | L.E. | Johnson (15) |

Strong Eagle Eleven To Meet Bridgewater

Coach Welsh Boasts Two Good Teams That Make American University Pre-Game Favorites to Win Over Smaller Rivals.

The strongest football team to represent American University in the school's history will open it's 1937 football season today against Bridgewater at 2:30 and for the first time will entertain a visiting team on its home field.

Boasting two teams that are ready to take the field and execute the plays that Coach Gus Welch, serving his first year as grid mentor at the Massachusetts avenue school, has taught them, the Eagles are a heavy pre-game favorite to present the Indian with an impressive victory.

Banking on a wide-open brand of football and several tricky plays built around Larry Howard, 135-pound quarterback, Welch will send his charges onto the field of play primed to the pink of condition. A two-week stay at his Blue Ridge Mountain Camp, topped off by two weeks of hard scrimmaging, has resulted in a perfect physical record for the Eagle squad.

Although either his first or second team is stronger than the American University clubs of the past few years, Welch will take no risk and will start what he has finally decided is his strongest line-up against the Virginians.

With Howard in the backfield will be 210-pound Sam Hickey, who only earned a regular berth several days ago; Sparky Bartlett and Johnny Jablonsky.

The line, which averages close to 200 pounds, from end to end, consists of George Brown and Don Davido, ends; Pete Stinik, a converted end who can be called on to play the terminal position in an emergency, and Kimber Shoop, a veteran of two years, at the tackle posts; Al Hanawalt, stocky all-Conference selection in 1935, and Sam Maize, who also fills in at center and guard, and Bob Hall, freshman, at center.

Hurt by the loss of several backs by graduation, Bridgewater will depend upon the ball-carrying ability of George Kamper, fullback, and "Fritz" Friddle, veteran of two years' experience.

Bridgewater, also the Eagles, will send a 170-pound line against the locals that has shown a lot of drive and scrap. George Kemper, who tops the scales at 190, last year's star tackle, has been moved into the backfield where he has shown impressively as a line plunger.

36,000 Fans Expected to See Gophers

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, Oct. 1.—Broadway may be more agitated by the big town's impending baseball civil war or the outcome of the classic Belmont futurity tomorrow but the rest of the country's sports interest will focus upon the glittering American gridiron scene.

October's first football Saturday features at least a dozen sectional "naturals," in addition to a flock of intersectional matches between more or less remote rivals, and full activity by the united front of "Ivy" colleges for the first time this season.

The Middle West takes a large chunk of the spotlight. Its headliner is Minnesota's attack on the Big Six stronghold, Nebraska, before a capacity turnout of 36,000 at Lincoln. Michigan's opening comeback guns, aimed at Michigan State, may attract 70,000 fans to the Ann Arbor battleground. Ohio State and Purdue, rivals for Big Ten prestige, expect to play before at least 45,000 in Columbus. Wisconsin and Marquette, neighboring foes, likely will draw 35,000.

The big game on the West Coast, pairing Southern California and Washington, 1936 conference champion, figures to attract 45,000 fans. Louisiana State and Texas, powers in rival conference groups, will wage one of the south's main battles before 20,000 at Baton Rouge. Cornell's big red team will renew an old rivalry with Colgate in the East's outstanding match, before a record early season crowd of 18,000 at Ithaca.

Opening games for such standout Midwestern entries as Notre Dame and Northwestern, the 1936 Big Ten, titleholder, together with the Eastern debut of the old "Big Three" and West Point carry their share of interest to fans at large, but the competitive risks involved are not conspicuous. Army, however, may have more than it can handle in Clemson, a rugged outfit from South Carolina that has two games under its belt.

Nebraska-Minnesota—The Huskers, with Francis and Cardwell, held Minnesota to a belated touchdown victory last season, but minus such backfield aces they will be lucky to hold Minnesota from another rampage. It's the toughest kind of an opening spot for the first Nebraska team coached by Biff Jones, the old Army man.

Southern California-Washington—S. C. is overdue on the comeback road and figures to win, but not without a real struggle.

Ohio State-Purdue—Despite reports that Ohio State will risk putting on a "razzle dazzle" show, the Bucks are the choice in what may prove a free-scoring affair.

Tulane-Auburn — They played a scoreless tie last year. It should be close again, but Tulane is picked.

Cornell-Colgate—Rated off the power they showed last week against Penn State, Cornell gets the call but it will take a better defensive exhibition by the big Red Team to stop Colgate's shifty Whit Jaeger.

Army-Clemson—The soldiers frankly are worried by the southerners. It's the spot for an upset, but Army is the choice.

Boston College-Kansas State—Gil Dobie may be worried, from habit, but Boston looks too tough for the visitors from Big Six territory.

Manhattan-Texas A. & M.—This return bout features the day's biggest intersectional mileage. Dick Todd should pace the Texans to victory in a rousing melee.

Temple-Mississippi — Another long-range rivalry, with not much more than a hunch that Temple will win.

Princeton-Virginia — The Tigers aren't what they were a few years ago, but the Cavaliers have just begun to rebuild. Princeton.

On the eastern "Ivy" front otherwise, there's no difficulty picking Yale over Maine, Harvard over Springfield, Columbia over Williams and Dartmouth over Amherst. Navy should trounce Citadel. George Washington is the choice over Wake Forest, New York University over Carnegie, and Duquesne over West Virginia Wesleyan.

Moving South it looks like Georgia over South Carolina, North Carolina over N. C. State on the rebound, Tennessee over Virginia Tech, Duke over Davidson by plenty and Georgia Tech over Mercer in a breeze.

Rice and Southern Methodist, in the Southwest, figure to beat Oklahoma and Centenary. Missouri's Big Six title contenders get the call over Colorado On the western front, California has too much power for Oregon State, but Idaho may upset Washington State, and Gonzaga has a good chance to beat St. Mary's.

Giants Have an Edge In Southpaw Hurlers

Comparison of World Series Hurling Staffs Shows Giants Are Well Equipped to Baffle Foes' Batters; Hubbell Is Standout.

By Alan Gould,
Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, Oct. 1.—One first-rate southpaw pitcher is a prerequisite for any pennant winning ball club. Two top-notch portsiders comes under the head of luxury.

That's one of the big reasons why the New York Giants, with a 2 to 1 margin over the Yankees in the left-handed flinging department, have a real chance to upset the world champions next week in a series more completely dominated by southpaws than any since 1924.

That was the year the Giants lost a seven-game thriller to the Washington Senators. In six games southpaws either were the winning or losing pitchers, or both. That's a record the lefties may take a shot at this year.

There's no doubt the three best southpaws currently operating in the major leagues will carry the main pitching responsibility in the second consecutive and, all told, fifth all-New York world series.

Vernon Gomez, shy, good naturedly goofy ace of the Yankee staff, has had one of his greatest years and is the No. 1 man of Joe McCarthy's otherwise right-handed mound staff. Lean, imperturbable Carl Hubbell, master of the screw ball and hitherto the lone portside starter for the Giants, has not only a running mate but an actual rival for southpaw honors in towering, big-eared Cliff Melton.

In Charmed Circle.

Each of the trio is in the charmed pitching circle this year. Hubbell's 22nd victory yesterday clinched the pennant, Gomez has posted 21 triumphs, including six shutouts, and Melton has collected 20 wins, the last six in a row, within a three weeks' period. The Giant freshman sensation is the first full-fledged rookie to win 20 games since the great Grover Cleveland Alexander broke into fast company with the Phillies.

Hubbell, who broke even in two starts against the Yankees last October, and Melton, one-time Yankee castoff, figure to exploit this year's obvious weakness of the Bronx Bombers against portsiders. The American League champions, terrors last year against all kinds of pitching, barely have broken even against southpaw slinging this season. Lefty Thornton Lee of the White Sox beat them five times. Rookie portsiders within the past month have had the proud Yankees breaking their backs trying to connect.

Perhaps the Giant pair will pay the penalty for all this lese majeste. But on form they look to have what it takes to handcuff the big Yankee hitters who swing from the portside, including Red Rolfe, Lou Gehrig, Bill Dickey and George Selkirk. The fact is that the world champions, during the last month, haven't looked particularly good against any effective brand of low ball pitching, right or left handed. All the Giant stars are exponents of "downers."

Hubbell May Start.

Hubbell figures to be Manager Bill Terry's choice to start the series next Wednesday, at the Stadium, with Gomez as his opponent. There has been a terrific buildup for Melton. Many shrewd observers predict he will get the first call. Terry himself says he won't announce a choice until Tuesday, but sound reasoning points to Hubbell, particularly in view of the old maestro's fine performance yesterday.

The great Oklahoman has had a spotty year, since hanging up his record of 24 consecutive victories, but he is still the "meal ticket," the man the players like to see out there in the "clutch." Hubbell not only has the benefit of more experience under fire than Melton, the sort of poise that insulates him from distracting influence, but he has a grand record for coming through under pressure. He won the openers for the Giants in 1935 and 1936.

"If Hubbell wins the opener," reasons a member of the Giants board of strategy, "this was a stimulation that will be well for Melton. If Hub is beaten, there is even greater incentive for the rookie; on the other hand, if Melton started and lost, it might destroy his entire confidence. As I see it, Melton is the ace in the hole."

Schumacher Is No. 3.

There's one thing certain. If Terry nominates Hubbell, it won't be because of sentiment but because he considers the veteran a better bet to win and steady the entire team at the outset of the big money battle. Another factor, of course, is that Hubbell will need the maximum rest between assignments.

Hal Schumacher, sinker-ball right-hander, is due for the No. 3 pitching spot for the Giants. Like Hubbell, Hal broke even in two struggles with the Yankees last year. He has also had an erratic year but been at his best in the last few weeks, regaining control and steadiness that may be traced to the handling of Catcher Harry Danning. Harry Gumbert is a possible fourth starter.

Red Ruffing and Monte Pearson round out the Yankees' "big three" for the series. Ruffing was beaten twice last year, but Pearson outpointed Hubbell in the fourth game. Both appear to be "right." The "dark horse" of the Yankee staff is Ivy Paul Andrews, Cleveland castoff, who suddenly came to life after donning a New York uniform. If Joe McCarthy picks a fourth starter Andrews may get the call over Bump Hadley, a 1936 winner.

Murphy, Malone Relieve.

Johnny Murphy and Pat Malone will do the relief pitching for the Yankees. Right-handed Dick Coffman and left-handed Al Smith are the bullpen experts of the Giants, although Terry will not hesitate to use either Melton or Hubbell in relief roles, if circumstances warrant. The Yankees will rely exclusively on Bill Dickey for all their backstopping and much of their hitting. Bill's big bat gives him the edge, though it may be recalled he was a bust at the plate last October. The Giants, as in the southpaw department, are twice blessed behind the plate. Danning's rise to equal status with Capt. Gus Mancuso this season has been a big factor in Giant success. Harry now handles the right-handers, Mancuso the southpaws.

HAP HARDELL, who has been rumored ready to take at least 50 positions since he gave up the football and track coaching jobs at Tech High, is considering doing a little coaching of football in the near future . . . he may answer the call of his close friend, DOC WHITE at Wilson Teachers College, who is in dire need of assistance since SYLVAN KING, former Central High and Princeton player, was forced to relinquish the job when business engagements interfered . . . it would be in an unofficial capacity, but would certainly be a blessing to WHITE and the boys . . . JIMMY LAKE, who has introduced fighters from the ring, here, for several years, found himself in sight of a hair-pulling contest recently between two amazons who were staging a spirited scrap in a downtown restaurant and he couldn't get a word in edgewise . . . he continued to dunk his doughnut and was contented to remain an interested spectator . . . he even overcame the urge to arise and announce the winner.

SCHWEIGERT, former OHIO STATE prep gymnast, demonstrates to the squad how to hit the ground in the easiest fashion when a rolling block fails to click . . . which is a nice thing to know . . . a statement made in this column that Trinity University will have the best team in New England and will go undefeated brought a severe letter of difference from DON C. ## Steel Industry Adds 9,000 Men to Pay Rolls

New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—The American Iron & Steel Institue, in a report issued today, said more than 603,000 employes were on the pay rolls of the steel industry during August, compared with a total of 594,000 employed the previous month.

The increase, the institute said, reflects the fact that steel operations averaged 83.6 per cent of capacity in August, compared with an average of 78.5 per cent in July. In August, 1936, the total number of employes was 522,000.

Building Trend Is Important To Business

Rapid Cost Increases Has Discouraged Construction.

New York, Oct. 1.—In its weekly summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Co., of New York, currently states that, "The building situation is a highly important factor in the general business outlook at this time because building is the only capital goods industry which has lagged far behind in the general return this year to approximately normal levels of production in leading times. Starting from a low level two years ago, building activity rose rapidly until mid-1937, when it encountered increases in costs so rapid as to discourage prospective builders.

"Although total building volume this year will probably show close to a 20 per cent increase over 1936, aggregate contract awards will still be only about 50 per cent of former normal levels. However, only the building industry can provide the stimulus for another sustained expansion in aggregate industrial activity.

"Unfortunately for the peace of mind of investors and businessmen currently, this can not yet be answered one way or the other. The letdown that has already occurred has tended to curb the rising trend of costs, however, while the trend of rents—a governing factor in residential construction—is still upward. Resistence to high building costs may be gradually overcome, and any evidence that a renewed upswing in building is to occur in 1938 would improve business confidence generally."

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Move Irregularly Lower in Light Trading; Wheat Declines, U. S. Bonds Drop.

New York, Oct. 1.—On a trading volume of around 650,000 shares, the smallest since August 31, the stock market moved without precision or purpose, and closed irregularly lower. Bonds were dull. United States Government bonds fell. For an hour after the lunch period, only one sale of a Government bond appeared on the ticker tape, and that covered a $1,000 transaction. Commodities hardened, but grains and cotton declined.

Stocks were notable for their dullness. The customary selling drives and the subsequent rallies that have marked the recent trading were largely absent. The market moved slowly over a narrow range without giving much sign of its intentions. Opening prices were mixed and for an hour or so after that receded moderately. By noon a steadier tone developed, and conditions in the afternoon were generally more pleasant.

Currency Fears.

Gold-mining shares found a better demand and reports continued to tell of a good demand for gold for hoarding purposes in London. Doubtless, some of the liquidation in railroad, utility and industrial stocks has been frightened into the golds, partly on the uncertainty over the immediate future of business, and partly because of greater belief that no such inflationary step as a cut in the gold price will take place at a time when all countries must be worrying a little over the tendency of business activity to slacken.

Under all this is the anxiety lest the chronic state of unbalanced budgets throughout the world, accentuated just now by the heavy fall in French currency, will force an all-round depreciation of currencies, if not a debacle for some.

Coppers Improve.

Other metal shares recovered a little more, and they were accompanied by an assortment of other stocks. Anaconda, Kennecott and Cerro de Pasco moved up a point. Nickel softened slightly. Steels were mixed.

Rails were irregular. Small gains were made in Baltimore & Ohio, Great Northern and Southern Railway. Chemicals, oils, rail equipments, tobaccos and rubbers fell a little. Motors were fairly steady. Loew's yielded to profit taking. Dealings in Radio subsided as the price weakened. Westinghouse was shaky. Farm implements gave up 1 to 4 points. Douglas Aircraft and Canada Dry had little support.

September Fall.

Stocks now are struggling to hold their own against a rather gloomy background. The fall in September was the heaviest since that of February, 1933, when the banks were collapsing under fear that the country would abandon the gold standard. Almost 13 per cent was cut from the stock values last month. The group hardest hit was the railroad equipment section, which dropped 26.6 per cent. Steels and irons were next, with a fall of 26 per cent. Rails fell only 15.8 per cent. No group was able to advance, although a few scattered stocks were quoted higher on the month. Mining shares were badly depressed, losing 23.7 per cent.

More Credit, Less Demand.

A summary of the credit situation at the week end as found in the Federal Reserve Board's statement shows an increase in the supply of credit and a decrease in the demand for it. Business itself is using more funds. Commercial loans in New York rose $18,000,000, but they further were offset by another sharp drop in brokers' loans. Security loans fell $44,000,000, a reflection of the liquidation of margin accounts in the stock market. In less than a month liquidation of stocks has brought down loans to brokers by $140,000,000. The total is now but slightly above $1,000,000,000, only nominally higher than a year ago, when, incidentally, prices were higher than they are now. Meanwhile, excess reserves increased $40,000,000 and the monetary gold stock rose the same amount.

One-Way Control.

Purely from the standpoint of the use or abuse of credit, a reduction in margin requirements for stocks could be argued, but action is not generally anticipated, as a cut in loans would be regarded as a direct bid by the authorities to the public to speculate more freely. More public speculation might indeed be a good thing as providing a more liquid market and making easier the raising of new capital by corporations; it nevertheless would appear too frank for the Government itself to encourage directly the buying of stocks on margin by the general public. The margin scale is almost certain to work in only one direction as a means of credit control by the Federal Reserve Board; it may be jacked higher to stop a bull market, but it is unlikely ever to be reduced to promote a bull market.

Margin Cut Discussed.

More light could be thrown on the use of bank credit if the Federal Reserve Board would break down brokers' loans, as it broke down commercial loans. A large portion of brokers' loans are not really that at all; they are loans made to dealers in securities, mostly Government bonds, and do not reflect conditions in the stock market. Banks here report sharp declines in loans made to brokers. In a few banks some expectation can be found of a downward revision in the margin requirements for the stock market, despite the political logic of the situation. As for commercial loans a new factor is said to be entering the equation in some parts of the country, particularly in the South. The setback in cotton has put the brakes on business and begun to pile up inventories with the result that old loans are being generally extended.

Tea Given Yesterday for Red Cross Members

Mrs. William D. Leahy (left), wife of the Chief of Naval Operations, and Mrs. Ernest J. Swift were present yesterday when the District chapter house of the American Red Cross was the scene of a tea given in honor of the workers who will assist Miss Mabel T. Boardman, national secretary, with the Red Cross booths during the Roll Call.

Because of the illness of Miss Boardman, who was unable to be present, Mrs. William D. Leahy and Mrs. Ernest J. Swift served as hostesses. Also assisting were Mrs. Warren Spencer and Miss Della Dennison.

Among the guests present were Mrs. Walter L. Reed, Mrs. Edward Goring Bliss, Mrs. Jean de Sibour, and Miss Nancy Leiter. Mrs. Claude A. Swanson had expected to be there, but illness prevented her, like Miss Boardman, from attending.

The Red Cross canteen workers who assisted in serving were Miss Virginia Tagart, Miss Dorothy McDonald, Mrs. Lorene Yost, Miss Dorothy Simons, Miss Jean Colburn, Miss Marie Federici, Miss Doris Rittle, Miss Helen Kennedy, Miss Marian Moncure, and Miss Margaret Burton. Staff assistants who also served were Miss Elizabeth Ralston, Miss Mary Bakshian, Miss Arman Bakshian, Mrs. L. K. F. Cheatham, and Miss Helen Beattie.

Announcement was made that Mrs. Leahy will direct the booth at the Willard Hotel, operated by the Navy and Marine Corps, in place of Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, who is ill; that Mrs. De Sibour will have charge of a similar booth at the Carlton Hotel, and that the one at Jelleff's will be under the direction of the Army Sewing Unit of the local chapter, with Mrs. Walter L. Reed in charge.

17,000 Women Hail 63d Year Of Delta Gamma

Seventeen thousand members of the Delta Gamma Fraternity may today look back to the date of its founding, 1874, as well as forward with the same pride in the fundamental principles and ideals which inspired its founders at that time. One of the founders, Mrs. Mary Comfort Leonard, is still living in Kosciusko, Miss. Delta Gamma came into existence in the South during that period after the War Between the States when it became expedient to educate women because of the lack of men teachers. Select schools were numerous and it was in one of these, the Lewis School at Oxford, Miss., that Delta Gamma was founded in January, 1874.

By 1881 seven other chapters had been established, one as far away as Madison, Wis. It was in this year, too, that the first convention was held in Oxford, Miss. They are now held every other year—the next being June, 1938, at the Broadmoor Hotel, Colorado Springs, Colo.

The growth of chapters flourished North, East and West and became international in 1913 when a chapter was installed in the University of Toronto, Canada. The expansion was not spectacular because of the rigid requirements and investigations imposed on petitioning groups. Today there are 49 chapters, four of which are in Canadian universities, 48 alumnae chapters and 82 associations. Thirty chapters own their own houses or lodges, with a real estate investment of over a million dollars

Magazine Started 1884.

The Anchora of Delta Gamma, the official magazine, was first published in 1884, ten years after the founding of the fraternity. Among its past editors is Miss Grace Abbott. The present editor, Mrs. Alta Gwinn Saunders, is associate professor of business English and head of the division at the University of Illinois, one of few women to hold an executive position in a major university.

The fraternity has a heavily endowed student loan fund from which loans are made to nonfraternity women as well as members. There are also five fellowships, in honor of the three founders, an early initiate, and Jessie Robertson Kingery, who was war-work chairman. The work done by the fraternity during the World War received wide recognition, including a decoration conferred upon Mrs. Kingery by the King and Queen of Belgium for her accomplishment for Belgium through the Delta Gamma Fraternity. "The Delta Gamma Clinic" at Marchienne, Belgium, is a permanent tribute to this service. At present the fraternity is embarking on a national project of assistance to the blind. The local alumnae group has already had a book transcribed into Braille and presented it to the National Library for the Blind.

American U. Chapter.

The newest chapter, one at American University, was installed last March with the national officers present and with the traditional Founders Day banquet, held at the Shoreham Hotel, attended by over 250 members from all parts of the United States, and with a formal introduction of the new chapter to other local groups at a reception at the Sulgrave Club. They have taken a prominent place in the scholastic, artistic and social life of American University. The local alumnae group numbers over 100 members, among whom are Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, Mrs. Merle Thorpe, Mrs. William E. Lee, Mrs. Isaac Hitt, Mrs. George Bowerman, Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenburg, former journalist and wife of the Senator from Michigan; Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen Rhode, former Congresswoman from Florida and United States Minister to Denmark; Ada L. Comstock, president of Radcliffe College since 1923; Grace Abbott, outstanding authority in social service work, as is her sister, Edith Abbott.

The officers of the alumnae group of Washington are Mrs. Wilma Wright Flood, president; Miss Maurine Gatewood, vice president; Miss Margaret Moses, secretary; Miss Esther Young, treasurer; Mrs. Arthur Perry, correspondent; Mrs. Thomas Kirby, Pan-Hellenic delegate, and Mrs. Richard Tatlow, jr., alternate delegate.

Country Club Village
is a prevalent characteristic, the natural sylvan beauty of Country Club Village is enhanced by the attractively diversified architecture and the landscaped grounds of every home. Differently designed homes lend a freshness to this community that literally beckons to those who desire surroundings of refined persons and tastes.
No two homes are alike in this distinct residential community, and those who appreciate finely built homes at a moderate price and know that a home is a lifetime investment will realize that Country Club Village is indeed an outstanding achievement and an ideal place to live.
This fact is doubly true in view of the fact that Country Club Village is locatea in a densely wooded section of the metropolitan area of Montgomery County, where values are advancing rapidly—and only 18 minutes from downtown, with all improvements completed.
Few beautiful sites are still available. Two exceptionally charming homes just completed are open for your inspection. Drive out and convince yourself. We shall gladly give you any information and help you with your new home problem. No obligation.
Out Mass. Ave. Extended, keep right into River road 300 yards to property or ½ mile beyond Kenwood Country Club.

Bob Burns Says—

'I'm beginnin' to see how these Hollywood actors and actresses get nervous. It's because they're always kept under such a strain tryin' to act the way they don't feel. Some days they're all broken up inside and they have'ta act like they're just bubblin' over with joy, and maybe some of the days they're feelin' their best they have'ta get in front of the camera and sob their hearts out. After so much of this kind of work they get so they don't know how to be natural anymore.

I know one actress who got up one morning on her day off and she called her maid in and she says, "I just feel terribly depressed today—please bring me a bottle of glycerin—I want to have a good cry!"

Group to Direct Lunch Drive Is Formed Here

Copeland Indorses Free Food for All U. S. School Children.

Formation of a steering committee to direct the campaign for free school lunches was announced yesterday at a meeting attended by 40 civic leaders.

Headed by Arthur C. Smith and Mrs. John Boyle, Jr., as co-chairmen, the committtee includes Sidney Lusk, Frank Buckley, Dr. John Fitzpatrick, Walter S. Handy and Allen V. de Ford.

While the Washington committee was completing campaign plans, Senator Copeland of New York, a veteran member of the Senate District committee, yesterday indorsed the movement for a Congressional appropriation for free lunches to be given impoverished school children throughout the country. Although stating that such an appropriation "would certainly be our salvation in future years", Mrs. Boyle last night indicated that Congressional action could not possibly affect the situation in Washington during the present school year.

With $3,000 already pledged by Opportunity House, committe members yesterday expressed hope that it would be possible to begin the free lunches next week.

Plans for raising the $100,000 required to finance noon meals for nearly 5,000 needy school children throughout the year were announced yesterday by Mrs. Boyle.

A large share in the proceds of a stunt flying demonstration at College Park Airport at 3 p. m. today and tomorrow will be turned over to the lunch fund. Additional returns are expected from collection boxes in Griffith Stadium at pro football games.

Sunday, October 11, has been designated as children's day in all Washington churches, and special collections will be taken for the benefit of the school lunches. Numerous charity teas and dances have also been scheduled for October and November.

Mrs. Boyle last night stressed the importance for all citizens engaged in collecting funds for the campaign of obtaining credentials from the executive committee, which now has headquarters in a room donated by the Mayflower Hotel.

Map Plans to Provide School Lunches

Dr. Abram Simon, Allen V. DeFord, chairman of the citizens' emergency committee for the feeding of hungry District school children, and Mrs. John M. Boyle, jr., organizer of the committee, discuss plans for raising $100,000 for the project. Headquarters of the committee will be set up in the Mayflower Hotel.

Sees Expulsion of Rebel Unions, Chartering of New Groups for Fight.

By the Associated Press.

Denver, Oct. 1 (AP).—William Green predicted today the American Federation of Labor would expel C. I. O. unions, then start unrestricted war on the John L. Lewis rebels.

"We'll carry the war into the enemy's country, where we're going to win decisive battles," the usually mild-mannered A. F. of L. president roared in a speech at the federation building trades department convention.

Later, at a press conference, Green said the federation probably would charter new unions to fight the C. I. O. in the automobile, steel, rubber and glass industries.

In Lewis' own territory, the soft coal field, Green said the A. F. of L. would support the Progressive Miners of America if that union started a campaign to supplant the United Mine Workers.

These campaigns, he said, depended upon the expulsion of the C. I. O. unions from the A. F. of L. since the Lewis unions were only suspended A. F. of L. members.

Bittner Challenges Girdler.

Milwaukee, Oct 1 (AP).—Van A. Bittner, of Chicago, Midwest director of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, challenged Tom Girdler, chairman of the board of directors of Republic Steel Corp., today to "sign up with the S. W. O. C. of the C. I. O. or prepare to go out of business."

Bittner, who issued his challenge during a talk at the State C. I. O. convention here, said the S. W. O. C. has contracts with 85 per cent of the country's steel manufacturers.

5 Congressmen, Court Justice Arrive on Liner

'Back President,' Urges Rep. Jenckes in Regard to Klan Issue.

New York, Oct. 1.—This was "National Capital Day" the incoming United States liner Manhattan. A justice of the Supreme Court, James Clark McReynolds, three Senators and two Representatives were on board.

Senators Sherman Minton, of Indiana, and Elbert D. Thomas, of Utah, and Representatives Fred Bierman, of Iowa, and Virginia Jenckes, of Indiana, all were delegates to the Interparliamentary Union Congress in Paris. Mrs. Jenckes was the first woman delegate to be named from this country.

All were interested in the situation arising from charges Justice Hugo Black was a life member of the Ku Klux Klan, but declined to discuss it, with the exception of Mrs. Jenckes.

"We must stand back of our President," Mrs. Jenckes said.

"I will say," said Thomas, "that it would be a good thing if, as a result of this controversy, all organizations similar to the Klan were abolished."

Byrnes said Europeans cannot understand why American businessmen have "the jitters."

"There is a lot of talk of war, but the best-informed people I talked to said there is little likelihood of war because no one wants it."

Byrnes said be believed the tax base should be broadened, but declined to say which income groups should be taxed more.

Lashed, Beaten, Burned, Girl Flees Home Nude

Bath, Me., Oct. 1 (AP).—Seven-year-old Betty Seavey of this city was treated in a hospital today for what Acting City Marshal Langdon E. Green described as the "worst case of child beating" in his experience.

While Memorial Hospital physicians treated the child for flatiron burns, scalded hand, whip welts and bruises, her mother and stepfather, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Wheeler, pleaded innocent in municipal court to a warrant charging assault and battery. Green said the girl was found at the home of neighbors, whither she had fled, naked, earlier today.

Chicago Guild Charges Unfairness by Tribune

Chicago, Oct. 1 (AP).—The American Newspaper Guild filed a complaint with the National Labor Relations Board today charging the Chicago Tribune with unfair labor practices.

The complaint charged the Tribune had "interfered with, restrained and coerced its employes . . . in the exercise of their right to self-organization . . . and in their right to engage in concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining and other mutual aid and protection."

Chesapeake Lines' Big Ships Barred To Passengers

Chesapeake Lines, operators of the City of Baltimore, which burned July 30 near Seven Foot Knoll, Md., yesterday was barred by the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation from carrying passengers on its larger ships due to nonobservance of safety-at-sea regulations.

Capt. Halert C. Shepheard, of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation, said last night only three ships of the Chesapeake Line would be affected by the regulations. He declared that as soon as the line completes installation of sprinkler systems on its vessels and complies with other minor requirements, the ban would be lifted. The bureau's action, he said, was not based on the ship fire but on an act of Congress, passed in 1936, which required the fire-fighting apparatus be ready for operation by October 1, 1937, on all ships carrying more than 50 passengers. Combination passenger-cargo ships of the line with accommodations for from 16 to 18 passengers will not be affected.

The report on the cause of the fire has not yet been submitted to Capt. Richard Stockton Field, director of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation, by the investigating committee.

Roosevelt Drives In Rain to Board Eastbound Train

En Route with President Roosevelt by Motor to Tacoma, Wash., Oct. 1 (AP).—President Roosevelt motored in a driving rain today to see the forest wonders of the Pacific Northwest.

En route on a 231-mile drive to Tacoma to reboard his special train for the return trip East, he paused in villages and towns along the way to receive cheers of local groups.

Despite the storm, the motorcade of more than 20 cars kept a speed of over 40 miles an hour on winding roads, bordered by fir and hemlocks as tall as 200 feet.

The President's arrival at Tacoma was timed for 6:30 p. m. (9:30 p. m. E. S. T.), the exact time of Associate Justice Hugo L. Black's radio broadcast, supposedly on allegations that Black is a member of the Ku Klux Klan.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 1 (AP).—Editor Leopold Koeberlein, of the Pitt News, student publication at the University of Pittsburgh, resigned today. His action, he said, was in protest against imposition of "censorship" after Robert Saffron, a columnist on the newspaper, criticizing the will of Andrew W. # Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

East and West were guilty of inconsistent tactics in the bidding of the hand shown below. West's first impression was that his length in hearts and shortness in spades increased the offensive value of his hand while at the same time diminished his partner's defensive strength. His bid of four hearts was, therefore, an attempt to shut out the opponents. East's bid of five hearts was intended as a sacrifice for a similar reason. But when South bid five spades, both East and West apparently decided that there was a chance to defeat this contract. They should have remembered that a contract of six hearts was not likely to be badly defeated (as a matter of fact it would have been set only one trick), but that a successful five spade contract by South would lose them the rubber. East and West should have bid six hearts, to settle for a small loss, instead of passing and risking a big loss.

East, dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

West opened the King of hearts, and East overtook with the Ace, to lead the Queen of clubs through South. South won with the Ace and methodically went about the correct elimination play.

One round of trumps was followed by a heart ruff in dummy. A club lead now forced the opponents in and compelled them either to lead diamonds or give declarer a ruff in the dummy and a diamond discard in his own hand. Declarer did not care which opponent won the club—a diamond lead from either opponent would restrict his loss in that suit to one trick.
